

YOUNG COUPLE BRUTALLY MURDERED AFTER BITTER FIGHT NEAR STOCKBRIDGE

Charges of Racketeering In AFL Assailed by Green

2,000 DELEGATES
FROM TEN STATES
HEAR FOES DEIFIED

Columnist Pegler Target of Green's Attack; Conference Adopts 16-Point Policy Program.

President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, denounced charges of racketeering within the AFL today and invited investigation whether an equal number of "dishonest people" are not associated with religion.

Addressing more than 2,000 labor leaders from 10 southern states at conclusion of a two-day southern AFL conference, Green shouted defiance to "foes of organized labor" and declared the Federation would endure as long as the nation itself.

"Deliberate Falsehood."

"But when any man, anywhere, or any place charges our great American labor movement with being a weakened institution, engaged in exploitation and racketeering, I throw the challenge back into his face and into his mouth. It is a deliberate falsehood."

Green directed his fire at "a great columnist who has been denouncing not only individuals connected with the American Federation of Labor but our great movement itself." Asked later if this was Columnist Westbrook Pegler, Green replied: "Of course, who else? There is no other."

The columnist, Green said, charged "That two or three men in two or three different cities of two or three different localities, connected with the AFL or organizations affiliated with it, are dishonest, are criminals, are guilty of crimes committed. And I think it has been stated that if called upon he could name 100 more."

"Small Percentage." Green continued, "that is not a very large percentage. It is a very small percentage of four and one-quarter million AFL members. I wonder if he couldn't find 100 or more dishonest people who are associated with a religious organization of our own nation."

"Now I want to state in answer to those charges that the American Federation of Labor denounces wrong-doing, racketeering criminals and exploiting criminals, any place and wherever committed, by any man or woman connected with our movement. We call upon the officers of the law to apply the statutes—the criminal statutes of the country—to any who are guilty of wrongdoing, either in our movement or outside of our movement. Can we do anything more? . . ."

Courts Try Criminals.

"We are not the government.
We do not possess power to try men and send them to prison for commission of crimes. Only the courts of the land, the properly constituted forces of government, can do that."

"I have no more authority to

William L. Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, is shown as he defied enemies of labor in a speech yesterday before 2,000 southern labor delegates attending a convention here. During his speech Green denounced racketeering charges against the AFL made by Columnist Westbrook Pegler.

AFL To Resist U. S. Prosecution Of Building Trades Unions

Chief Counsel Joseph Padway, of Federation, Denounces Anti-Trust Action as 'Destructive' to Organized Labor.

The American Federation of Labor yesterday promised Assistant United States Attorney General Thurman Arnold "the damndest fight he ever had" over anti-trust prosecution of building trades unions.

Denouncing Arnold as "a publicity-seeking individual," Chief Counsel Joseph Padway, of the AFL, assailed federal indictments of union building trades groups in New Orleans and elsewhere as "ruthless, brutal, inconsistent, damaging, and destructive of the principles of organized labor." He contended labor unions specifically are exempt from provisions of the Sherman anti-trust act.

Padway's statements came near the close of a two-day southern organization conference of the AFL, and followed by a few hours a charge by John P. Coyne, president of the building and construction trades of the AFL, that Arnold was seeking "to place organized labor under the thumb of the federal government." Arnold earlier, in Washington, had made public a letter to Coyne, inviting labor leaders to a conference to clear up "any misunderstanding that exists" over the government's position.

Padway and Representative Robert Ramspeck, Democrat, Georgia, yesterday criticized ad-

'Scales Tipping' Goebbels Boasts

BERLIN, March 3. — (UP) — Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels today opened the 770th annual Leipzig fair with a radio-cast in which he asserted that "it is clear even to a layman that the scales are gradually tipping in Germany's favor."

Goebbels said exhibitors at the ancient fair, founded in 1170, totaled 6,600 this year, only 82 below last year's figure.

He lashed out at the "brutal British blockade" which he claimed had failed to throttle Germany.

NAZI PLANE BOMBS BRITISH LINER, 108 FEARED DEAD

Finns Still Holding Vi-puri They Claim, While Red Forces Surround
City; Ship Is Attacked.

By The Associated Press.
The bombing of the British liner Domala by a Nazi plane with 108 persons believed killed, was reported last night by the British admiralty as German, English and French warplanes engaged in a sudden burst of fighting at sea and on the western front.

Elsewhere, Finnish troops reported they still were holding Viipuri despite Russian claims that the Red army had taken part of the deserted city, and the French said they captured a new contingent of Germans in a western front ambush.

Battle-weary Finnish defenders continued their withdrawal toward new defense lines at some points on the western side of the Karelian isthmus but reported the repulse of Red army thrusts on the eastern Karelian front and north of Lake Ladoga. The Finns said 1,000 Russians were killed in the latter area.

Hamlet Captured.

Russia's communique on yesterday's fighting said the Red army continued to surround Viipuri, capturing the Hamlet of Saarela north of the city and the island of Tupparansaari, about 15 miles south of Viipuri. The Red army said a fully-equipped Finnish headquarters also was seized.

A British admiralty communique said a German Keinkel bomber overtook the 8,441-ton Domala in the English channel early Saturday and scored three direct hits with bombs.

The Domala had sailed from Antwerp, Belgium, with 149 British Indian subjects who had been released by the Germans and were being repatriated. Twenty British and 88 British Indians are missing and feared dead. The Domala made port.

Meanwhile Reuters (British news agency) reported from Ostend that the Netherlands freighter Limburg, 345 tons, had been attacked in the North sea by a Nazi warplane which raked her decks with machine gun fire.

Nine warplanes were accounted for in official British, French and German reports on week-end western front aerial flights.

Britain said she accounted for two German planes Saturday and a third yesterday.

France said her pursuit planes downed two Nazi craft on French territory Saturday.

British fighters sent one of their own planes crashing in flames in England after mistaking it for a German bomber.

Two British steamers were sunk as the fast pace of the war at sea continued.

Londoners, Without Being Flippant About It, Get a Kick Out of War, Ex-Georgian Reveals

City Is in Uniform and, Despite Sirens, Britons
'Carry On.'

By DEEZY SCOTT.
"Bawth" and "darby" sound no stranger in London than "sugah" and "Jawga" do here.

Kathleen Burch Brooks' ear is attuned to both kinds of talk. She's home from her "home" in London, ably disproving that only the pseudo-socialites of England are leaving "the island of Friday-to-Tuesday" week ends this winter.

She was born in Royston, Ga., where her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Burch, still live. Her husband, the late Charles Brook, a London business man, was originally a Georgian, too.

Now a tea-loving, dinner-dressing Englishwoman, she discussed the war, particularly the fun of war, without being flippant about its tragedy.

"London is beautiful with uniforms—but the girls are stealing the show. Theirs are chic and colorful. We had a glorious time before I left. That festive 'tomorrow we may die attitude' prevailed and even the creepy siren that starts in your toes and works up to your head to tell you of the air-raid warning hasn't dampened the spirit of the town."

Of Americans in the London spotlight, all she would say was "They don't call her 'Wally' over there . . . it's 'Mrs. Simpson.'"

She concluded, "The nicest thing about the English is that they don't get so intoxicated . . . they just get beautifully lit."

Her saucy little red hat and snappy tweed sports suit disproving her statements about Englishwomen's inferior taste in clothes—or proving she's still an American woman at heart—Mrs. Kathleen Burch Brooks, of London, was back in her native Georgia yesterday telling stories about wartime society.

VATICAN CITY, March 3.—(AP)—Pope Pius XII prayed anew for peace today at a pontifical mass celebrated in St. Peter's for the inhabitants of his native city, Rome, where he was born 64 years ago yesterday.

The pontiff beseeched Jesus Christ "to summon the holy concord of all Christian nations in a common universal homage of faith and adoration of love and prayer for the tranquility and the peace of peoples."

Training Ship Hits Army Plane Here

Much excitement but little damage resulted when a training ship of the Southeastern Training school side-swiped an army plane yesterday afternoon at the municipal airport. The civilian plane sustained a badly bent wing-tip, while the government plane was practically unscathed.

Airport officials said the accident occurred when the training plane ran into the motionless army plane while it was maneuvering for a takeoff.

'Jock' Amazed At Success of GWTW Film

Whitney, Friends Pause
Here En Route From Miami to Los Angeles.

John Hay (Jock) Whitney, New York sportsman and financier, pausing here yesterday en route by plane from Miami to Los Angeles, freely discussed the financial success of "Gone With the Wind" which to date has grossed $10,000,000, but he absolutely refused to talk about rumors of a divorce.

"Anything I say on that subject would be wrong," he commented crisply.

Whitney, one of the financial backers of David O. Selznick's screen version of Margaret Mitchell's novel of the Old South, expressed his, and the motion picture industry's amazement over the number of paid admissions to the film here, a total which, he said, almost equaled the population of the city.

"The demand of prints of 'Gone With the Wind' film is so great that we will continue throughout the year making extra prints so that the great film may be shown everywhere as quickly as possible," Whitney declared. "The policy of indefinite runs will be continued."

WELLES FINISHES NAZI CONFERENCES

Leaves for Switzerland
After Conversations
With Goering and Hess.

BERLIN, March 3.—(AP)—Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles wound up a fact-finding visit to Germany for President Roosevelt today by conferring lengthily with Adolf Hitler's key aides, Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering and Nazi Deputy Leader Rudolf Hess.

Welles' conference with Goering at Karin Hall, the No. 2 Nazi's wooded country estate north of Berlin, was as hedged with official silence as his Saturday's talk with Hitler, but it seemed certain the American envoy again was told of German confidence in military and economic power to attain victory.

Welles and his party left Berlin from the blacked-out Anhalter station for Lausanne, Switzerland, at 2:11 o'clock, Atlanta time.

BATTERED BODIES FOUND SPRAWLED IN MUD OF FIELD

Pair Beaten to Death at Midnight Saturday; Officers Believe More Than One Is Involved.

By FRANK DRAKE,
Staff Writer.

McDONOUGH, Ga., March 3.—The brutally battered bodies of pretty, brunet Sarah Rawls, 20, and Benton Ford, 24, both of McDonough, were found early this morning sprawled in the mud of a cornfield six miles from here. Their heads had been crushed by repeated blows with a blunt, sharp-edged instrument.

Strands of hair found in the hands of the victims indicated to officers that the couple had put up a terrific fight before they were beaten to death by one or more persons. But a downpour of rain just before daybreak obliterated all signs of the struggle in the field. Time of the double murder was fixed by police at Saturday midnight.

No Clues Found.

Sheriff Henry Amis, of Henry county, and J. T. Dailey, chief of the DeKalb county police, who were called in to aid in the investigation of the mysterious slaying of the popular couple, said tonight they had no clues as to the murderer but they were investigating along two lines—that the couple was killed by a jealous suitor of the girl, or that robbery was the motive.

The bodies were found about 8:30 o'clock this morning some 100 yards off the Atlanta-McDonough highway, three miles south of Stockbridge, near the Hudson bridge over Cotton Indian creek.

Benton Ford lay face down 30 feet from the pick-up truck in which he and Miss Rawls were seen to leave a roadside spot north of Stockbridge about 11:30 o'clock Saturday night after an evening of amusement with friends from McDonough. Sarah Rawls' body was 15 feet nearer the truck, face up and arms evidently carefully placed by her sides.

Weapon Not Found.

The blunt instrument which caused their deaths had not been found tonight despite a search by officers over acres of land surrounding the death scene and in the near-by creek. Officers believe the death weapon was an ax.

Four heavy blows broke Miss Rawls' skull and right shoulder. Her right hand and arm bore deep, slashing cuts, as though it had been hit as she tried to ward off the rain of death-dealing blows. Eight blows had smashed Benton Ford's head. A powerful man and a star athlete, residents of McDonough.

Chief J. T. Dailey, of the DeKalb police (left), and Sheriff Henry Amis, of Henry county, are shown examining a bracelet, identified as belonging to Miss Sarah Rawls, which was found in a cornfield nearly 50 yards away from where her battered body and that of her companion, Benton Ford, were discovered.

COUPLE MURDERED

Stockbridge said they doubted if one man alone could have overcome him. He was one of two men in McDonough who could lift a 450-pound anvil.

Charles Wilkinson, 19-year-old farmer, whose home is not more than 200 yards from the death spot, discovered the bodies and reported the double murder to the sheriff.

He said he saw a car stop on the highway 250 feet south of his home near where a field road winds off the pavement through the cornfield. Someone from the car picked up something from the highway and that excited Charles Wilkinson's curiosity. He went to see what was the matter. The car pulled off and Wilkinson, on his way back home, to check his line of rabbit traps, he told the sheriff.

Comes Upon Bodies.
Behind a knoll that is cloaked from Highway No. 42 by thick growing scrub pines, he came upon the pick-up truck and the two bodies, he said.

Mystifying officers was the fact that the watch and bracelet that Miss Rawls wore yesterday were found in different directions some 50 yards from where the bodies lay.

The bracelet, inscribed "Johnnie," was loaned to Miss Rawls by a girl friend, the dead girl's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Rawls, told the officers.

Friends of Benton Ford, who was the son of Mrs. Rebecca Ford, a widow living on a farm three miles from here, said he had had $25 or more in a pocketbook Saturday, but the pocketbook and money were not found.

Young Men Questioned.
Dailey and Amis and DeKalb Detectives John Jones and W. B. Griffin tonight were questioning half a dozen or more young men in Henry county and near-by Griffin who had had dates with Miss Rawls. Her parents furnished officers the names.

Feeling was high here and officers planned to lodge any suspects in jails outside the county when arrested.

Coroner H. J. Hand is to hold an inquest at 8 o'clock tomorrow morning at the funeral establishment of D. T. Carmichael & Son, where the bodies were brought after their discovery this morning.

The pick-up truck which brought Miss Rawls and Ford away from the gay party Saturday night was under lock and key here tonight. Dailey and his men are to examine it for fingerprints late tonight or tomorrow morning.

WAR HITS EXPORTS OF FARM PRODUCTS

Local Consumption Rises;
Wheat Tops $1; Cotton
May Decline.

WASHINGTON, March 3.—(P) The Agriculture Department said today that the European war had diminished the export demand for farm products, but had increased domestic demand through stimulating industrial production.

"United States exports of tobacco and fruits have been greatly reduced," it said. "Exports of pork and lard are not up to the volume that would flow normally in a year of large production and low prices. Export sales of cotton have been good, but have declined recently. Little wheat is going abroad."

The department pointed out that wheat had again topped a dollar a bushel in domestic markets, reflecting increased demand for wheat and flour, renewed concern over poor United States winter wheat prospects and the likelihood of cold weather damage to wheat in Europe.

It said domestic cotton consumption may decline in the next few months, but that the total for the current season was expected to be close to the high record of 7,950,000 bales established in the 1936-37 season.

The relatively high price of feed in relation to quotations for meat animals is creating an unfavorable situation for cattle and hog farmers, the department said. Increased marketings of livestock were forecast for the spring and early summer months.

Supplies of most vegetables are expected to be smaller this spring, the department said, because of damage to southern crops by freezing weather in January.

EX-EDITOR DIES AT 80.
HARLAN, Iowa, March 3.—(P) P. B. Brown, 80, retired editor and publisher of the former Harlan Republican, now the Harlan News-Advertiser, died at his home here today.

show little, due to the heavy rain, it was said.

Carmichael, the undertaker, said from his examination of the bodies he believed two persons were involved in the murder. The blows killed Ford were twice as heavy as those which killed the girl, he said.

George Ford, older brother of the dead youth, said his friends had told him and the officers that the party at the roadside inn was pleasant and that no arguments occurred.

"Benton told one boy he was leaving there to come directly to McDonough," he said.

With slim clues on which to travel, Dailey and Amis plan to renew and widen the search tomorrow for the "blunt instrument."

Hundreds of curious passers-by stopped along the highway this afternoon and scores from McDonough and Stockbridge came to see the death scene. Highway patrolmen were called to handle traffic.

Miss Rawls is survived by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Rawls; one brother, Carl Rawls; and a sister, Miss Frances Rawls. Ford is survived by his mother, Mrs. Rebecca Ford; two brothers, George and Levi Ford; and one sister, Mrs. Dozier Leverette.

YOUTH IS SLAIN
ATTEMPTING BURGLARY

SAVANNAH, Ga., March 3.—(P)—William Henry Saxon, 20, of Central Junction, is dead today and his two companions in jail as the result of what police believe was an early morning attempt to burglarize the Roseland Inn, a night club three and a half miles from Savannah.

County Officers Nathan Cohen and T. J. Dooley said Saxon was shot by R. L. Cowart, operator of the Roseland Inn, when he saw the youth attempting to enter the side window of the building after he had closed his business for the night.

Sergeant Lee Ingram of county police said James Purvis, 21, was arrested this morning at his home, and that City Detective Harry F. Beebe and A. Wiman arrested John W. Brown, 22, this afternoon in a small downtown hotel. He said both youths admitted stealing an automobile, of being with Saxon, and corroborated Cowart's account of the shooting.

MAN SHOTS SON.
AT CHATHAM INN
BAINBRIDGE, Ga., March 3.—(P)—Sheriff W. J. Catledge, of Decatur county, said tonight that Cleve Hartley, about 60, of an undesignated town in Florida, shot his son, W. C. Hartley, here this afternoon and then committed suicide.

Young Hartley, about 29, is in Riverside hospital in Bainbridge suffering from a bullet wound in his chest. Attendants said his condition is critical and he is not expected to recover.

Sheriff Catledge reported that the son was shot when he prevented his father from seeing his mother after the elder Hartley had threatened her. The father immediately left the scene, the officer related, and was not found until about 8 o'clock tonight about a mile and a half out of Bainbridge on the Dothan highway.

He was dead when Preston Copeland and Oscar Williams, both of Bainbridge, discovered him. Sheriff Catledge said his wound was self-inflicted.

Young Hartley has been a resident of Bainbridge about six months. He was shot at his home where his parents were staying while on a visit from Florida.

A .38 caliber pistol was used in both shootings, the sheriff said. The elder Hartley formerly lived in Bleckley. He is survived by his wife, his son here, another son in California, whose name was not available, and one daughter, Mrs. J. M. Weeks, Jacksonville, Florida.

Weather Skips
A Date and It's Spring, Tra-La

Calendars to the contrary, spring paid a visit to Atlanta yesterday.

Though skies were only partly clear, with the sun playing hide and seek, the warm temperatures sent Atlantans to the open road yesterday afternoon.

In many parts of the city, trees were budding and flowers were blossoming.

The weather bureau says spring officially begins with the coming of 12:24 p. m., March 20, with straw hat days not far behind. But the weather experts say spring really arrives when warm weather arrives—and it did in Atlanta yesterday with the mercury climbing to 67 degrees and never once falling below 54 degrees.

And then, too, the always certain sign of spring was observed. Atlanta's beautiful women, at least a scattering of them, were parading Peachtree street yesterday afternoon bedecked in the light, airy fashions of the season.

FINNISH SEAMAN
IS KILLED IN U. S.

Helsinki Resident Held;
Another Sailor Wounded
in Baltimore.

BALTIMORE, March 3.—(P)—One seaman was shot and killed and another was critically wounded today on a Finnish freighter Aagot in Baltimore harbor.

Police arrested Erich Arvo Ilmari Tholberg, 45, who gave his home as Helsinki, Finland's capital, in connection with the shootings.

The dead man was Thure Henrik Backmann, 26, a fireman of Hango, Finland. Anti Ponn, 45, able seaman, of Koivisto, Finland, was still unconscious tonight with a bullet wound in his abdomen.

Lloyd F. Elswick, a customs guard, said he heard three shots fired from the Aagot and disarmed Tholberg.

"He tried to shoot me but his pistol jammed," Elswick told Police Captain John L. Carroll.

Carroll said Tholberg and other seamen from the ship claimed Backmann and Ponn had attacked Tholberg after an argument.

Tholberg was held without bail. Three other seamen from the Aagot were detained in $500 bail each as state witnesses because the Aagot is scheduled to sail Thursday.

PALESTINE ACTION
BY BRITAIN DELAYED

Dr. Weizmann, Zionist
Head, Says Jews' Treatment 'Condemned.'

BOSTON, March 3.—(P)—Dr. Chaim Weizmann, president of the World Zionist Organization, said tonight the present policy of the British government regarding Palestine "lands condemned and will fall under the weight of its own injustice."

Referring to the disclosure last week by Britain's colonial secretary, Malcolm MacDonald, that orders had been issued enforcing land regulations under which Arabs in the population are forbidden to sell to Jews in the greater part of Palestine, Weizmann told an audience of New England Jewry:

"Without discussing the legal and international implications of this action, it is not conceivable that we shall admit of the creation in Palestine, in our national home, of a ghetto—of a pale of settlement reminiscent of czarist Russia, rather than the England of A. D. 1918."

"But the colonial secretary is not England. His attempt to tear to shreds the Balfour declaration and to make a mockery of the Jewish national home will prove unavailing as, in the long perspective of history, have all previous attempts of our enemies to destroy us."

Declaring "a Nazi-dominated world would be one in which no Jew could live," he added, "we Jews would be deeply reluctant to cast our lot with the British government at a time like this."

MRS. ROOSEVELT
LANDS IN CAROLINA

RALIEGH, N. C., March 3.—(UP)—Three Silver Fleet transport planes of Eastern Airlines landed at Raleigh airport tonight because of bad weather at other landing fields.

One of the planes, bound for Miami to Washington with Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt aboard, was forced to turn back at Richmond, Va., and landed here last night.

One of the planes landed shortly after 9 p. m. and the other landed 15 minutes later.

F.D.R. ENDS SEVENTH YEAR AS PRESIDENT

Still Silent as to Third Term Intentions; Health Is Good.

WASHINGTON, March 3.—(P) President Roosevelt rounded out seven historic years in the White House today without breaking the third term silence which many New Dealers believe will enable him to win renomination or pick the 1940 Democratic presidential contender.

He spent the day quietly with his mother, who arrived last night to worship with her son and his cabinet tomorrow at church services commemorating the anniversary of his first inauguration on March 4, 1933.

Any idea that the President might make the anniversary the occasion for an announcement of his attitude toward a third term was dispelled by the chief executive himself yesterday. He told reporters he would issue no anniversary statement on the subject.

The end of his seventh year in office, during one of the most turbulent periods in the political history of the United States, found the chief executive a little grayer about the temples than when he entered the White House and the lines in his face etched a trifle deeper.

But he had a fresh and healthy-looking tan from his just-completed sea voyage to the Panama canal and beyond, and obviously was much rested as a result of that trip.

F. D. R. AGAINST FIELD
IN FLORIDA ELECTION

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., March 3.—(P)—It will be Roosevelt against the field, despite the fact he hasn't announced any third-term intentions, when Florida elects delegates on May 7 to the Democratic national convention.

Floridians advocating a third term for the President will make up and offer to voters a full slate of delegate candidates publicly committed to his nomination when the national convention is held at Chicago next July.

Against these will stand another slate favoring the nomination of Vice President John N. Garner for president, and other delegate candidates publicly endorsing Paul V. McNutt, Postmaster General James A. Farley, Secretary of State Cordell Hull and probably others.

HATCH EXTENSION
BEFORE SENATE TODAY

WASHINGTON, March 3.—(P) The senate will take up tomorrow one of the session's most controversial pieces of legislation, a bill to extend to the Hatch act's prohibition against pernicious political activities to a half million state employees paid in whole or part with federal funds.

Although two staunch administration supporters, Senators Minton, Democrat, Indiana, and Lucas, Democrat, Illinois, have served notice of a fight against the measure, Democratic Leader Barkley of Kentucky said he thought there was no doubt that a majority of the senate favored enactment of the bill. Barkley predicted it would be approved speedily.

LEADERS TO BACK
PIPELINE COMPANY

Business Convinced Project Will Cut Gas Cost,
Clay Says.

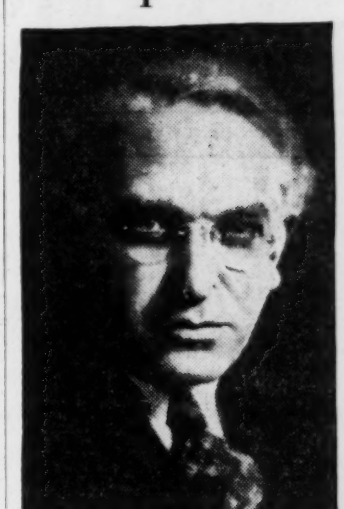

Business and civic leaders from the more than 50 counties which, according to plans, will be served by the development will appear before the State Highway Board March 21 to support the application of the Southeastern Pipeline Company for a permit to build beneath the roads of the state. A. S. Clay, president of the company, said last night.

The company's application is being opposed by the railroads and by business interests in Savannah and Brunswick, where gasoline is a major import.

"Business generally is convinced the pipeline will reduce the cost of gasoline in Georgia and will provide a safer method for the transportation of the product," Clay said.

The Southeastern Pipeline Company plans to construct the pipeline from St. Joe, Fla., to Chattanooga, serving Macon, Atlanta and other cities along the route.

Did the Spring thaws wreck your streets?

EVERY spring many streets show the ruinous effects of thawing weather and heavy rains. Streets become dangerous... closing for repairs hurts business... taxpayers lose thousands of dollars spent on needless maintenance.

But there is no spring break-up on concrete streets! Regardless of weather, they go right on delivering reliable service with only minor routine maintenance and no time out for repairs.

Concrete is the safest street because it resists skidding, wet or dry.

And concrete costs less to build than other pavements of equal load-carrying capacity. Be sure your streets are paved with concrete.

GREEN PROPOSES A NEW ORDER FOR LABOR RELATIONS

Must Be Dominated by Righteousness and Social Consciousness, He Says in Church Talk.

By KEN TURNER.

A new order for future employer and employee relations was proposed here yesterday by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor.

Speaking before a capacity crowd at the Druid Hills Baptist church, Green, a Baptist deacon in his home town of Coschocton, Ohio, told his listeners that "this new order must be dominated by righteousness, which after all is religion, and an awakened social consciousness."

"Co-operation, good will and understanding must be substituted for class hatred, bitterness and industrial warfare," he said. "The rights and freedom of all employers and employees must be preserved and respected."

He lauded the national labor relations act as providing a new concept of the "perfect law of liberty" in that it gave to men and women the right to bargain collectively free from intimidation and coercion.

In emphasizing the need for an awakened social consciousness, he said that it is only logical that the great mass of working men and

Pilot Rescues Chinese Girl, Is Forced To Pay Her Board

NEW YORK, March 3.—(P)—
That this story may be understood by the occidental mind, it must be stated that when a Chinese is snatched from the jaws of death it is not uncommon for him to be stricken from the official rolls of the living.

So it was with the Chinese girl whom C. S. Vaughn, transport pilot, lifted dripping from the cold waters of the Yangtze river nearly four years ago. And so it is that Vaughn is still getting bills—and paying—for the board and lodging of a soul for whose rescue he was responsible.

In today's southbound air mail
there flew a piece of parchment paper, inscribed in beautiful Chinese script, dunning Vaughn for the board and keep of a soul which is, paradoxically, still among the quick.

Vaughn, who has paid these bills with growing protest, will receive the dun at Miami when he returns from his Pan-American Airways Clipper run to Rio de Janeiro.

women should want to enjoy a more abundant life, and that only through organization could they obtain it.

He criticized child labor with this question:
"How can children apply themselves to learning if they are forced at a tender age to work in factories and mills?"

His speech fairly sparked with pro-Americanism as he rapped
dictators, Communism, Fascism and Nazism and warned, "We must use every means at our disposal to expose the dangers of their teachings."

He said the AFL had worked long and hard against these.

The story goes back to that day when Vaughn brought his airplane to rest at Wahn-Sien.

A strong wind whipped across the river. He called for help to weight down a pontoon and thereby control a wing, tugging at its mooring. The first volunteer was a girl, eager to speed the progress of aviation. Men followed her, though, and in the melee the girl went overboard.

No one moved. So Vaughn shed his coat and dived.

Nearly seven months passed before Vaughn returned to Wahn-Sien, and awaiting him was a constabulary officer. In his hand was a bill for $3.18 "Mex" ($1.59)
"for board and lodging one rescued soul, responsibility Pilot Vaughn."

Vaughn argued with the officer.
Officially the girl had quit this life. Vaughn had seen fit to bring her back. Therefore she was his charge until she got married.
Vaughn paid and has been paying ever since.

Ryan added that he would seek ciliator in the week-old strike of 5,000 longshoremen in the Florida ports of Miami, Jacksonville, Fort Pierce and Port Everglades, and in Charleston, S. C., and Savannah,

President of the United States has

"It is the membership of the national union itself, who elected the officers and pay them their salaries... that possesses authority to remove them from office."

"These men (critics of the AFL) are more interested in striking at the heart of the labor movement than in developing moral standards in America. The real purpose of the attack is the AFL itself."

The conference adopted a 16-point declaration of policy, for the most part re-endorsing aims of the American Federation of Labor.

These points included ratification of the child labor amendment, extension of workmen's compensation benefits, reduction of the waiting period in unemployment compensation, approval of old age insurance and health insurance, affirmation of principles involved in the national labor relations act and wage-hour law, advocacy of wage-collection laws, and protest against convict labor.

The conference also urged congressional approval on pending federal legislation which would extend loan limits of the United States Housing Authority for slum-clearance projects.

PEGLER DENIES GREEN'S CHARGES

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., March 3 (P)—Westbrook Pegler, columnist, who was called a foe of organized labor by A. F. of L. President
William Green today, asserted Green and other executive council members were labor's real foes
"because they do nothing about racketeers within their ranks."

"It is not enough to deplore," stated the writer, vacationing here.
"It is up to the A. F. of L. to get them out. But no action and the
A. F. of L.'s action regarding the building trades indictments gives the answer to the whole thing—in one breath they ask the authorities to go to work on the racketeers, and in the next they promise the authorities who have gone to work the damndest fight you ever saw."

"Green carefully misquotes me as saying I could name a hundred other criminals associated with the labor movement. What I said was that I could name a hundred more criminals who are labor leaders. I doubt that Mr. Green could name 100 religious leaders who are criminals."

"I'm not an enemy of labor. I'm too unimportant. But Mr. Green and his associates are enemies of labor, because they do nothing about these racketeers within their ranks."

many today expressed regret when the Belgian ambassador, Vicomte Davignon, protested in the foreign office over the shooting down
Saturday of Belgian planes by a

The following official German version of the incident was given:
"A German scout, returning from the north of France was attacked by seven planes of the English hurricane type. Because of this, and the impression he was flying over French soil, the Ger-

ATLANTA, GA., MARCH 4, 1940.

Driver Responsibility.

That the amount of financial compensation paid the victim—or his family—of an automobile accident seldom covers the actual loss involved is the conclusion of a committee to study compensation for automobile accidents, according to an article appearing in the March issue of The American Mercury.

What is more, that report declares only a comparatively small proportion of automobiles in general use are covered by accident liability insurance. Based upon 1932 figures, it is shown that when the driver is insured, about 90 per cent of accident victims receive some compensation, whereas only about one in five receive compensation when the driver at fault is uninsured. And, of course, the amount of compensation from uninsured drivers averages lower than from the insured.

The toll of accident death upon the highways is one of the most familiar of American problems. More than 30,000 lives are lost, annually, each year. And, although in many cases no compensation is paid by the individual responsible, at the same time the loss must be met. It thus falls, in the final analysis, upon the general public, the little-considered taxpayer who has to reimburse for every loss.

However, until there is a far greater uniformity in the state laws in regard to automobiles, it will be hopeless to consider any method for requiring liability insurance on all cars. Aside from the simple requirement of license number plates there is no automobile law which operates in all states. Minimum driving age varies from 14 to 18 years; some states require driver tests and some do not, some require periodic examination of cars, and so to safety for operation, and some do not. Even speed limits and rules of the road show widest conceivable variation.

With the millions of automobiles on the highways of the nation every day, it will someday be realized that uniformity in automobile vehicle laws is essential for public safety and that some method must be worked out whereby some degree of accident liability shall attach to every vehicle and everyone who drives it.

The shock treatment for the mentally ill shows an impressive proportion of cures. Some tough cases, like economists, may require a second depression.

New York Example

The plan to keep the new Marietta highway cleared of eyesores and free of all but passenger traffic was paralleled not many years ago in New York state when the first of a series of parkways was constructed. As in the instance of the Marietta road, there was considerable opposition to the premise that scenic, fast roadways should be rigidly restricted to passenger cars, whether en route from point to point or simply being used for pleasure trips.

Some features of the New York parkway plan would not be feasible in the instance of the Marietta highway, but the general concept, if adopted, would make the road an example for many similar projects within the state, once the advantages had been demonstrated.

Necessary filling stations abutting on the New York parkways are of a standard design—which also is followed in the construction of state police substations, in small parks and in places where food is served.

There are no commercial signboards. Natural beauty is retained except where that retention would operate against the maximum safety for motorists, and there landscaping is brought into play. The result is a combination of beauty hardly equalled in the finest parks of the world.

The plan might have been considered visionary some few years ago. A decade has proved it is not. There is no reason why this experience cannot be drawn upon to make the Marietta road a stretch of highway beauty for many years rather than a new ribbon of concrete to be scarred and battered into a carbon copy of a thousand other roads.

Hereafter, God watches over Hitler and guides his hand, he says. In fairness to them both, it ought to be added that the rape of Poland was the Fuehrer's idea.

The ingenious Nazi is now weaving suit fabrics of the skins of fish. Heretofore, only hering bones have been twisted, in the tweed.

In Missouri, the federales seize a citizen's wrist watch in part payment on back income tax. It is a break with the older policy of giving the evader the works.

The Mikado speaks of peace in his latest poem, and his army says the war is over. As for Confucius, he say Japanese lay China egg.

The Ready Red Cross

The slogan adopted for the 1940 Red Cross roll call in Atlanta is peculiarly apt and fitting. It is "Keep the Red Cross Ready," which, in a sentence, illustrates the primary function of the organization and reminds of the many times when it has proven itself the one rock of hope amid turbulent waters of disaster.

The Red Cross is, primarily, an organization for the meeting of emergency. In case of flood, conflagration, pestilence or hurricane it is the Red Cross which extends the first hand of succor to the victims and it is the Red Cross which holds out the possibility of restoration to the sufferers.

Georgia knows the Red Cross well. In those tornado emergencies which have struck at Gainesville, Cordele, Albany, the Red Cross has revealed its magnificent worth. It is but logical that Georgians should hold a particularly warm spot in their hearts for an organization which has so frequently proven itself a staunch friend in time of trouble.

The annual roll call for Red Cross membership opens within the next couple of weeks. It is its purpose to enroll as many Georgians—men, women and children—in its membership as possible. It costs very little to be a member and it is good to feel, when disaster strikes, that this organization, of which you are a part, is there, always ready, to meet the situation.

It is only through widespread membership that it is possible to "Keep the Red Cross Ready."

"If anyone looks for me," said the little neutral, as he stepped out for a late newspaper, "tell them I'm on the third tierhook from the right."

The Real Thing

Statisticians may point to figures that show three times as many attend basketball games, in the United States, as are spectators at baseball. They may reinforce their argument with the gate receipt totals for collegiate and professional football. They may then, triumphantly, declare that the diamond is today relegated to third place in the national sport ranking, bowing both to the gridiron and the indoor court.

Statistics mean nothing, however, when they clash with that annual stirring of the spirit that comes with the first dribble of diamond figures toward the training camps of Florida, with the preliminary announcement on every sport page that the local team is, not kidding, destined to win the pennant in its particular league, this year.

The surest sign of the approach of spring in America is not found in the computations of meteorologists, nor in the migrations of the birds. It is not evidenced alone in the tiny buds of fresh green that push through the dark soil, nor the scent of new life that is borne upon the breeze. It is not only the recurrent call of the open spaces nor the new-washed blue of an April sky.

The one sure sign of spring is the item on the sports pages that tells how Outfielder Whoopis has returned his signed contract and that Pitcher Whizzem has gone to Florida for an early start on the training season.

When these items are seen sluggish souls begin to awaken and imagination paints a picture of hot summer afternoons in the grand stand or of the pulse pounding crack of bat against ball while the crowd cheers the hometown hero.

"Is insomnia catching?" a western medical publicist is asked. All we know is that when the Fuehrer can't sleep, all Europe walks the floor.

A Symbol Desecrated

American Indians are protesting the decision of four Arizona tribes dropping the use of the swastika, or fylot, in the weaving of native baskets and blankets. The action, taken to condemn Nazi acts of oppression, can scarcely be justified, they say.

The swastika has for untold generations been the symbol of friendship among the Indians. To abandon it because of a transitory theft of the symbol as one of terror and pillage is to belie the great heritage of good from which it has grown. The cross, too, has been desecrated, but it lives on through good and evil, stronger because it has survived the misuse of man.

The swastika is not alone the symbol of the Indians. It is also that of another great race, the Finns. It has been adopted by a large part of the civilized world as a token of good luck. It has its roots in the folklore of many peoples, always the symbol of that which we consider good. It, too, has lived on through good and evil.

Long after it has been wiped from the red and black banners of Germany, the swastika will live as a symbol that men cannot use that which is good in the service of that which is evil.

One cannot, by proclamation or by burning, wipe out a heritage.

It has been a week now since a citizen was talked into running for President by friends who were unaware of having taken any part in the conversation.

When America is given back to the Indian, and Europe turned over to the Red Cross, there's a South Sea Island we've heard about, with no taxes.

Editorial of the Day

HE SAID SOMETHING. (From the Charleston News and Courier.)

A voice on the air said that insurance companies can deal in astronomical figures without a single drop of red ink. He said something. Government has gone into the insurance business. It calls it social security. Government is itching to meddle with the private insurance companies. It calls it regulation. If and when government shall rule the insurance companies, there will be use for red ink. Now is the time for policy-holders to speak up.

THE CAPITAL PARADE

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

KENNEDY'S DESPAIR WASHINGTON, March 3.—Just before he sailed back to London, Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy managed a flash of his old self. Annoyed by Italian press attacks on American diplomats as "enriched green-grocers" he informed his friends that his shipboard statement would be, "at least we didn't have to marry the boss' daughter to get our jobs."

Fortunately for the feelings of Mussolini's son-in-law and foreign minister, Count Ciano, Kennedy repressed his inclination to verbal case-bumping when sailing time came. Indeed, he may have lost the inclination completely in the interval, for the once-mercenary ambassador returned to Europe in the same mood of black despair in which he reached this country.

The contrast in this respect between Kennedy and Ambassador to France William C. Bullitt, is both interesting and important. Kennedy's gloom is partly caused by ill-health, but chiefly by his conviction that no matter who wins the war, chaos impends in Europe. Bullitt, on the other hand, came home to report exuding optimism. He has told the President and many others that the Allied morale is admirable; that eventual victory of the English and French is already virtually assured, and that the only serious problem ahead is the possible exhaustion, before the war ends, of French and English assets available for purchasing war supplies abroad.

Kennedy, meanwhile, besides his general pessimism, also remains extremely dubious of the ability of the English to protect the shipping convoys bringing vital goods and raw materials from German air attacks. In addition, the President has lately received detailed reports from Germany expressing a view precisely opposite to Bullitt's while the reports from the Balkans are understood to substantiate Bullitt's opinion. All of which only goes to show in how uncertain an atmosphere the President and his fellow makers of American foreign policy are forced to reach their vastly important decisions.

WHITNEY CASE AGAIN

There's likely to be another flare-up of the Richard Whitney case, according to Robert E. Wood, from the position as a public representative on the board of governors of the New York Stock Exchange. Wood's resignation was tendered without comment, but he has privately told many business friends that it was caused by a conviction that the exchange was doing too little to prevent recurrence of such incidents as the Whitney failure.

Wood's stand constitutes a change in attitude, since he sided with the exchange when President Robert Maynard Hutchins, of Chicago University, resigned from the board of directors because of investigation of his change is that he had not realized that the Whitney firm took accounts from private individuals such as Mrs. Mary Stevens Baird, who is now suing the exchange for a large sum she lost in the Whitney failure.

Exchange officials argue that Wood's stand is unreasonable, since he read the record, including mention of Mrs. Baird's loss, at the time of the Hutchins row. They also say that Wood does not give credit enough to the various steps taken, such as the more detailed independent audits of brokers' books and the rules against brokers' trading, to safeguard customers of brokerage houses. Wood is said to feel, however, that the exchange ought to go along with the SEC plans for a protective brokerage bank. With Wood's support to stimulate them, SEC members are talking of renewing pressure on the exchange to put its plan through.

LITERARY OUTPUT

Thomas E. Dewey's Wyoming statement, that the cost of making the federal government's "propaganda" less than the cost of the Wyoming state government, has stirred the Post Office Department to a mild form of statistics-collecting. By an amendment inserted in the post office appropriation bill last year, Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney, of Wyoming, the very state Dewey spoke in, forbade franking of government hand-outs and other literature except when requested by the recipient.

The O'Mahoney amendment reduced the 1939 government literary output from an estimated potential total of 970,000,000 pieces of mail, to an estimated total of 692,000,000. The reduction of 278,000,000 was thus effected. Nevertheless, the government still seems to be rather free and copious in its correspondence with the citizenry.

SILHOUETTES

By RALPH T. JONES.

What Do You Think of This?

A proposal has been made, and is now under consideration by a committee, to give children in Atlanta's public schools one unit of scholastic credit if they can produce evidence they are regular attendants at Sunday school. Any Sunday school.

The proposal of that innovation undoubtedly was motivated with the best intentions. The idea is to encourage Sunday school attendance, to awaken a greater interest in the church among the children of today and thus, it is hoped, enlarge the church membership and improve the character of the adult population of tomorrow.

However, regardless of the high quality of motive, there are several objections which may be raised to the plan. Objections which, to my mind, are conclusive and should prevent it from going into effect.

This column is written with the thought of expressing those objections and with the hope it will draw forth the opinions of others, both pro and con, on the issue.

Church And State.

In the first place it seems to me to involve a serious violation of that first amendment to the constitution which guarantees the free exercise of religion.

Freedom of religion means, if it means anything, that everyone shall have the right to believe the tenets of any church, or of none. That the conscience of each individual shall be the sole guide to his religious affiliation, or non-affiliation. As I once heard a distinguished minister of the gospel say, every man has the right to his own belief, even if it is only a belief in his non-belief.

There may be—I do not say there is—a family with children in Atlanta, Georgia, which does not believe in any of the established churches. A family which, sincerely and honestly, prefers to stay away from church and Sunday school both. Perhaps that family knows it, by attendance, it showed its agreement with the tenets of any church it would be tainted with hypocrisy. And prefers its spiritual honesty to any other consideration.

Well, would it be fair and in accord with the religious freedom guaranteed by the constitution, to penalize the children of that family, by giving to other children credit unearned in school? At best, a credit given for something they would do anyway, credit or no credit?

I may be super-sensitive on any question involving the rights of freedom of religion, of speech, of press and of assembly. But it does seem to me that the plan suggested for Atlanta schools comes dangerously close, at least, to tampering with the full freedom of religious belief that is fundamental to the American system.

Another Objection.

There is, however, another ground for objection. Bribery, coercion or compulsion are alike repulsive in connection with religion or the church. I

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

Would Smear Many

NEW YORK, March 3.—The Federal Bureau of Investigation would be an investigation to investigate investigations. It would shock most of us, but it would cause it would smear so many of us. The FBI has more dirt on more Americans, including senators, representatives, labor leaders, governors, mayors and members of some of the political families of the New Deal government than the foulest whelp of an open-air grand jury bred to a commercial blackmail of the press, radio and screen could refer up in a thousand and one nights under the goaty spell of the toxic weeds.

While Georgia has suffered comparatively little, the national administration of the act has been harmful and patently prejudicial. Many acts of the national board administering the act have been so obviously unfair as to arouse national indignation.

The cards apparently were so stacked in favor of the bitterest labor organization, they (the administration) never attempted even to appear in the attitude of impartiality. The board often was arrogant and insolent. The enforcement of the 18th amendment brought about murder and a disrespect for law which extends to this day. The law properly was repealed.

Part of the fear which has held back industry and the development of employment must be put at the feet of the NLRB.

AS TO ECONOMICS

Mr. John Frey, who looks like a Baptist minister, but who is not, talks in an interesting manner of economics and of economic theories.

Listening to him one gets a new viewpoint on the third term. Mr. Frey voted for Roosevelt. He was willing to try the economic experiments. Now, he wants to try something else. He does not attack Roosevelt. He believes in his integrity. But he does not agree with the economists who advise Roosevelt.

Many supporters of Roosevelt have hoped he would not run for a third term. They did not care for the bitterness and the trial charges which would be emphasized in the campaign.

There are other reasons Mr. Frey argued about as follows: Roosevelt, of course, accepted the advice of his economists. The cotton farmer of the south will do as an example. He was in desperate straits. The economists said to peg his crop. It was done. He was paid for cotton. It went into warehouses. The world wanted cotton. It was in American warehouses. Not on the market. Therefore—

Brazil and other countries began to grow cotton. They were encouraged to grow it. Today American capital is building mills in Brazil and other South American countries. The cotton farmer still is in a desperate condition.

That is not good economy. Any economy which halts a crop or an industry has failed. It is not an unfriendly act to say we need a new experiment. Roosevelt is committed to a policy which will not save the farmer or industry. One may believe in Roosevelt. But his economists need changing. The Moieys, the Tugwells and all the early "brain-trusters" are gone. Those who have followed after are no better.

Roosevelt is a great American and a sincere one. So far, no one greater than he is on the political scene. More important is the fact we need a new economic planning. The experiments have not worked. That was about the gist of his argument as I got it.

PART OF THE ANSWER

Mr. Frey believes that industry or rather permitted the theoretical economists carry it. "It is time," he said, "that industry and labor sat down across a table and talked this thing out and applied their own practical economics."

"If they don't then the college economists, who have never treated with practical economy until given their chance in the present administration, will keep on with it. They have driven American cotton off the market and into warehouses. They have stimulated other countries to grow it because they couldn't buy ours. They already have started cotton mills in Mexico and South America. They will do the same for other industries."

Labor and Industry—working together—and not leaving the job to college professors to apply experiments and theories of which they are not so sure themselves—that is part of Mr. Frey's answer. He is not hostile to college professors but he does not care to have them apply their theories to industry. In this, he believes, the record speaks for itself. The fault lies, he thinks, with labor and industry.

Labor and Industry never have bothered with economics. He thinks it is high time they began to study them and apply their own deductions.

"We won't get well quickly," he said. "One cannot go along sick for a long time and then get up one morning and take some fruit salts and a pill and get well that day."

It was an interesting week end, with the AFL in our town.

A Bit of Conversation Showing What Nippon Thinks Of Your Uncle

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

Japan: "I see in the papers where some English official says you've got me cold. He says if you quit buying my silk and quit selling me oil and iron, I'll be ruined."

Japan: "I've noticed that. But you did cancel our commercial treaty, in a nice legal way, as though preparing to quit trading with me."

Uncle Sam: "Well, when neighbors begin acting unfriendly, I always think the best plan is to quit having anything to do with them. If there is anything I don't like, it's a quarrel."

Japan: "But you seem to be starting a quarrel now. If you quit trading with me, I'll consider it an insult."

Uncle Sam: "For that matter, you'd probably feel insulted if my boys should bomb and sink one of your gunboats."

Japan: "That's a crack about the Panay, of course. But that was an accident. My boys didn't know it was yours."

Uncle Sam: "I've always heard the Japanese had poor eyesight."

Japan: "Well, I apologized for it and paid your claim for damage."

Uncle Sam: "So you did. But you haven't paid for bombing other property belonging to my people and destroying their business and trying to drive them out of China so you can hog the market."

Japan: "Well, no; but that is part of the new order in Asia. Asia for the Asiatics is my slogan."

Uncle Sam: "You mean Asia for the Japanese."

Japan: "That's the general idea. But I am only copying your example. A Monroe Doctrine for the Orient."

Uncle Sam: "Don't kid me. It's been done by experts. The Monroe Doctrine doesn't keep you from trading in the Americas. I even let you sell stuff in the Philippines."

Japan: "That is very kind of you—and simple. But I can't let your people sell goods in China, for I need the market. If they persist in trying, they will naturally be—er, pushed around."

Uncle Sam: "Yet you have the nerve to say it would be an unfriendly act if I quit trading with you!"

Japan: "I'd probably do something desperate."

Uncle Sam: "But why in thunder can't you quit abusing my people and be reasonable, so I won't have to quit trading with you?"

Japan: "Oh, that would be backing down, and I'd lose face. It isn't necessary, anyway, for you'll back down rather than risk serious trouble."

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

NOT SINCE PROHIBITION!

Across the table from me at the Preston Arkwright luncheon for William B. Green and his associates sat John P. Frey. He is president of the metal trades department of the American Federation. He is recognized as one of the keenest economists in the labor movement. He is the author of many articles and pamphlets on economics.

I had found, on a sort of man-to-man survey, that the men of the federation believed the Wagner act to be one of the finest pieces of legislation ever enacted—

But the worst administered. John Frey said it better than any of the others. He said: "I agree with the colleagues of mine you have questioned. I, too, believe the act is a splendid one."

"But in my opinion the administration of the Wagner act has been even more harmful to this country than was the administration of the eighteenth amendment. Until the administration of the Wagner act came along that administration had been the most colossally stupid in our history of amazing differences between legislation and administration. The administration of the Wagner act is much worse."

While Georgia has suffered comparatively little, the national administration of the act has been harmful and patently prejudicial. Many acts of the national board administering the act have been so obviously unfair as to arouse national indignation.

The cards apparently were so stacked in favor of the bitterest labor organization, they (the administration) never attempted even to appear in the attitude of impartiality. TAKES TWO TO MAKE PEACE

Editor, Constitution: Permit me to congratulate you heartily on your splendid editorial entitled "No Road to Peace." I agree with you fully.

No matter how much our President Roosevelt uses his good offices to restore world peace, as long as only one party is anxious for peace while the other party willfully and openly advocates and insists on war, there can be no peace.

TALMADGE STARTLES PENSIONS ADVOCATE

Editor, Constitution: If I had read in your paper that Herbert Hoover had announced his intention to support Roosevelt for a third term, I would not have been surprised. I was to read that Eugene Talmadge is now in favor of old-age pensions.

In the beginning of his political career I followed and voted for Mr. Talmadge. But in recent years I have thought against him, talked against him and voted against him solely because of his opposition to pensions to old people. Basing my conclusion entirely on what he has said and what he has done, I had come to look on him, among all our political leaders, as the most dangerous foe of pensions, and this is saying a good deal. Few of our leaders have given old-age pensions wholehearted support.

I have gone further in my thinking, and reached the conclusion that his influence has been largely responsible for the breakdown in the system we tried to set up. I know his veto caused a two-year delay in making the start we have made. Two years is a long time to old men and women. I await with intense interest further statements from him on this subject. I don't understand his "per capita" argument.

It was certainly a most pleasant surprise and the thrill of a lifetime to see an article I had written appear on the editorial page of a paper whose editorials maintain the high standards as do those of The Constitution. F. EDWARD HERBERT.

KIWANIS TO HEAR ANTI-LONG EDITOR

Man Who Directed Louisiana Graft Exposure Will Address Club.

F. Edward Herbert, city editor of the New Orleans States, the newspaper credited with cracking the Huey Long dynasty, will be an Atlanta visitor tomorrow.

Herbert—one of the key men in that campaign—will address the Atlanta Kiwanis club at 12:30 on the subject, "Community Assets." He will share speaking honors with Lambdin Kay, director of public service for radio station WSB, when the club participates in a "Press and Radio Appreciation Week."

The States' long campaign against corruption in Louisiana had its first real break on June 7, 1939. On that day the paper printed a photograph of a truck unloading window sashing in front of a half-built home.

Close examination revealed that the license plates on the truck had been issued to Louisiana State University. The half-built house belonged to the wife of a colonel on the governor's staff.

Publication of this photograph set off a series of political firecrackers that brought the Long regime into disrepute, sent many a Long henchman to jail, and finally resulted in the recent defeat of the late Huey's brother when he tried to succeed himself as governor.

Before becoming city editor in 1937, Herbert was a star reporter for the States.

12 SOUGHT IN THEFT OF $100,000 GOLD

Miners Sold Ore Stolen in Colorado, State Charges; Brings $10 a Ton.

GRAND JUNCTION, Colo., March 3.—(UP)—A dozen men were charged last night with the theft of $100,000 in gold ore which when sold on the market brings a maximum of $10 a ton.

District Attorney William F. Haywood agreed that it would take a long time for 12 men to get $100,000 worth of the ore by carrying it out in lunch pails and their pockets. He was convinced, however, that the men sought were responsible for most if not all of the ore missing.

The charges ranged from buying and receiving stolen gold to conspiracy to steal gold ore and conspiracy to break into a mining company safe. Names of those accused were not revealed pending their apprehension.

Haywood said the gold ore was taken from the Smuggler-Union mine at Telluride. The miners sold it after they had accumulated large quantities, Haywood said.

TRUST CASE RULING EXPECTED TODAY

Three Important Decisions By Supreme Court Are Expected.

WASHINGTON, March 2.—(UP)—The supreme court meets tomorrow for a session at which it may announce its decision in the government's anti-trust suit against 12 major oil companies and five of their officers on price-fixing charges.

The tribunal heard oral argument in the appeal a month ago and a final decision—on issues which are vital to the Justice Department's widespread drive—may have been reached.

The case is one of three important controversies which may see court action Monday. The other two:

1. The government's request for a high court rule on the power of the federal government to regulate the construction of hydro-electric power dams on small streams whose commercial navigability is in question. It considers the lower court decision too great a restriction on federal authority.

2. The appeal of the National Licorice Company, Brooklyn, from a National Labor Relations Board order outlawing a group of individual contracts between employers and workers. The board contends the contracts sign away broad benefits guaranteed by the Wagner act and therefore are invalid. It has asked, over the protests of the company that the instruments are entirely illegal, that the individual contract system, which it calls the "Balleisen Anti-Union Technique"—be ruled out of existence.

HOUSE WIELDS AX ON F.D.R. ESTIMATES

Millions Lopped Off Army Budget and Interior Department.

WASHINGTON, March 3.—(P)—House economy advocates said they had trimmed about $3,000,000 from President Roosevelt's estimates for the Interior Department and discussed slashing $50,000,000 from the army's budget for the coming fiscal year.

The Interior Department supply bill comes up for house debate tomorrow. The President had recommended $122,057,464 for the department's far-flung activities, such as reclamation and irrigation—$50,622,301 below the current year's figure. Informed legislators said the appropriations subcommittee had trimmed it to about $119,000,000.

The subcommittee's reported action brings the total cuts already tentatively effected in budget estimates to about $293,000,000.

GOOD MORNING

By LOUIE D. NEWTON.

Dr. Elam F. Dempsey has published his life of Bishop Atticus Green Haygood, a remarkable book of 800 pages, about one of the greatest preachers of all time. I treasure this volume, just from the press, as one of the most useful books I shall ever possess. It was Bishop Haygood himself who wrote, in the introduction to the "Life of Bishop Haygood," "The biography of a useful man must itself be useful." The Parthenon Press of the Southern Publishing House, Nashville, has done a good job in printing this notable biography.

Bishop Haygood was born at Watkinsonville in 1839. He died at Oxford in 1896. He entered Emory College, at Oxford, in 1856, and in his sophomore year began teaching in a Sunday school about two miles from the campus. During his undergraduate years, 1856-59, he was regarded as the most intellectual student in the college. From his earliest youth he had read Milton, Macaulay, Carlyle, Ruskin, Hume and Gibbon. He spent every Saturday during his student days in the Phi Gamma Debating Society. He made less than a dozen social visits during his student days, devoting all of his time to study and religious work. His closest friend was Young J. Allen. In 1858 these students, under God, started a great revival which revolutionized the college. He delivered his first sermon at Mt. Pleasant church, near Oxford, April, 1858.

Upon his graduation in 1859, he entered the ministry in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and his first appointment was at Sparta. He had in his first pastorate such hearers as Bishop Pierce, Dr. William J. Sasnett, Dr. E. M. Pendleton and Colonel Richard Malcolm Johnston. Governor Joseph E. Brown appointed him chaplain of the Fifteenth Georgia regiment. Haygood delivered a great sermon to the soldiers at Manassas Junction in Virginia, a sermon which made him famous. I cannot pursue the details of Bishop Haygood's life, which included many notable pastorates and a biography in the Methodist church. His ability as a preacher is everywhere recognized and powerfully attested by many notable persons in Dr. Dempsey's book. He preached throughout the nation. Henry Grady said: "I lighted my torch at Haygood's flame."

His ministry covered the entire reach of applied Christianity. Notable in his many-sided ministry was his effort on behalf of the Negroes, of which service Bishop Hughes says: "His interest in the improvement of conditions for our Negro people is in itself a sufficient reason for his greatness."

CAYE RETURNS FROM $15,000,000 ROAD SHOW IN CHICAGO

IS ENTHUSIASTIC OVER IMPROVED ROAD MACHINERY

Says Manufacturers Playing Vital Part in Savings to Taxpayers.

An interview with W. C. Caye, vice president and general manager of W. C. Caye & Company, recently disclosed that he has just returned from the national road show at Chicago, where approximately $15,000,000 worth of road building equipment was displayed for the industry.

In this display such manufacturers represented by the above subject company as Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Company, Koehring Company, Blaw-Knox Company, Sullivan Machinery Company and others showed all current models and latest developments in construction and road building equipment.

Mr. Caye was very enthusiastic over the many improvements made in these lines and feels that the machinery industry is playing a very vital part toward assisting the taxpayer in reducing the costs of road building, due to improved methods and equipment.

Mr. Caye seems to be most keenly interested in the latest and improved line of Allis-Chalmers full Diesel tractors, equipped with General Motors' two-cycle Diesel engines. These engines were first offered to the public in the large streamline fast passenger trains of the west and middle west, and now are offered exclusively in the Allis-Chalmers line of crawler type tractors, and Koehring line of pneumatic tires, wheel scrapers. All of this has played a big part in reducing the cost of road building.

A very unique piece of road

Latest in Road Building Equipment

building equipment now offered by the Caye Company is their line of Allis-Chalmers leaning wheel and leaning frame power control graders, same being illustrated in a picture on this page.

Mr. Caye emphasizes the fact that this grader, drawn by one of their late model HD10 General Motors Diesel power tractors, is peculiarly adapted for heavy maintenance, road widening, and general road construction. In addition to having sold a number of these graders to various counties in the state, they contemplate a series of demonstrations to other counties in order to prove this contention.

Another new piece of equipment offered to the trade this year is the model W Allis-Chalmers speed patrol, strictly for road maintenance purposes. Same travels easily at a speed of around 20 miles per hour from one job to another and can instantly be placed at work on arrival at the job site. Demonstration.

tions are also going on in various counties throughout the state on this unit as well.

In addition to the above, there has been a great improvement in concrete road paving equipment, surface treatment, asphalt road paving equipment, etc., all to the benefit of the user and taxpayer.

itary and lintless as well. In preparation," Mr. Rothschild continued, "they go through the following treatment: Washed in chemicals, boiled in live steam, baked at more than 225 degrees for 30 minutes. When finished they are as sterile as hospital gauze."

"Sanitary wipers mean insurance for your employees. They eliminate infections that set in from minor cuts. They keep cutting oil from becoming contaminated. They are one of the surest means of keeping your working forces intact."

During the many years in business Rothschild & Company has made a special study of the needs of the consuming trade, commercial and industrial.

Mr. Rothschild guarantees that his firm's rags are absolutely free from buttons, hooks, eyes and stringy material. This assurance—and he lives up to his guarantee—saves time and money. A worker wastes considerable time if he has to pick out a rag to suit his purpose and he throws away those that do not suit him. Experience will teach you that though you spend a little more by buying select material, such as this firm is putting out, you will save considerable money over a period of time as it is most economical in use.

Rothschild & Company will also handle especially prepared cloths for polishing purposes, such as autos, furniture, silverware, etc.

"The Rothschild Company superior quality wiping cloths are not only clean, but they are sanitary."

Complete sterilization of new and reclaimed materials is the outstanding feature of the service offered by Rothschild & Company, Inc., specialists in wiping cloths, 444 Edgewood avenue, according to Emil Rothschild, owner.

"It is our policy to satisfy the trade with worthwhile merchandise and prompt and courteous service," Mr. Rothschild said. "Our merchandise is put up in convenient sanitary cartons and bales. All merchandise is guaranteed and we maintain a prompt delivery service."

TERMITE CONTROL FIRM OFFERS NEW TYPE VENTILATOR

It Has Just Been Introduced and Installed in Atlanta Home.

A new and vastly improved foundation wall ventilator has just been introduced in Atlanta. With this ventilator a two-minute walk around the outside of the house is all that is required to open or close the vents as the weather dictates.

It is now generally recognized that cross-circulation of fresh air under buildings is most important in order to dispel moisture and retard rot and fungus growth on the timbers, as well as to eliminate damp, musty odors, and discourage roaches, water bugs, thousand legs and other insects. The FHA now requires two square feet of ventilator area for each 25 running feet of wall. However, ventilation, to be satisfactory, must be controlled. It is necessary during severe winter weather to close the ventilators in order to avoid cold floors, heat losses and frozen pipes. And yet, ventilation during the mild winter days is most important, as it is then that the moisture is highest.

Blocking and unblocking old-style vents is a major operation, involving a lot of fuss and bother, as anyone who has done the job will testify. This program has now been solved by the new Terminix Ventilator, just announced by Albert Grever, recently named president and general manager of Terminix Company, local unit of the world's largest termite control organization.

The Terminix Ventilator is made of non-rusting aluminum and brass and equipped with a double-strength glass shutter which admits sunlight under the house when closed, to block out the cold. It also is provided with a built-in copper screen to keep insects, rodents and snakes from getting under the house.

These new ventilators are available through most building material dealers and hardware stores in Atlanta and may be seen at the office of Bruce Terminix Company, 109 Ponce de Leon avenue, N. E. They can be readily installed to replace obsolete ventilators now in buildings.

ICELAND STEAMER STANDS BY TO AID LEAKING VESSEL

Buffeted Freighters Coming to Her Assistance to Resume Their Courses.

ROCKLAND, Me., March 3.—(P)—The 3,456-ton Greek freighter Makis, leaking in tempestuous weather 1,000 miles east of New York, has advised ships proceeding to her assistance to resume their courses, Mackay Radio reported today.

The ship's master said the Iceland steamer Godafoss was standing by to lend assistance if it should be required during the night.

Although the Makis had a broken rudder, chain, and hatch, and water in her engine room, the captain was unwilling to abandon ship.

En route from Gulf of Mexico to Liverpool and Havre, the 10-foot steamer sent out an SOS call yesterday afternoon asking for immediate assistance.

At least seven ships swerved off their courses to go to her aid. The American export liner, Exochorda, one of them, reported seas in the vicinity rough, with a westerly gale blowing.

CUTTER'S CREW THINKS SUB ATTACK GENUINE

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico, March 3.—(P)—Members of the crew of the United States coast guard cutter Unalga, back from an unsuccessful search for the British ship Southgate, said tonight they believed the Southgate's report of a submarine attack would be confirmed when the vessel reaches port.

They said three messages were picked up from the Southgate late Friday. There was silence thereafter until late yesterday, when the ship in response to a shore station said she was safe but not to call her again.

ATLANTA SQUAD STARTS DRILLS TODAY AT CAMP

Legs Get Early Attention; Arm Conditioning Will Come Later.

By JACK TROY.

SAVANNAH, Ga., March 3.—Manager Paul Richards will operate on the sound theory again this season that a ball player—and especially pitchers—is no better than his legs.

In few training camps do players run as much as do the Crackers players. The pitchers drill on first one thing and then another—and then they run. They shag flies on the run. They hold sprint races. They jog.

Sometimes they run until little white spot dance before their eyes. Richards believes that pitchers pitch with their legs, so to speak. And they come first. The arms come later.

Any training camp supervised by Manager Richards is never a call to arms. When a player is able to go nine innings without his legs tiring, he is a much better performer for his team.

On the first few days, outside of the usual routine, the emphasis will be on running. Later on there will be even more emphasis on it.

A great transformation will take place in the squad of the Crackers tomorrow.

While the first workout is scheduled for Monday arrivals to camp included only Larry Miller, Charley Burgess and T. J. Bankston. Mack Stewart, who has been working out for a week, already was on hand.

On the morrow, however, the majority of catchers, pitchers and infielders will be in camp. Richards has called for the first week are expected to be on hand at the Savannah club's park.

As usual, perfect weather prevails for opening day.

Before the week is out, all 35 members of the squad are expected to be at work.

President Earl Mann checked in tonight and the new club doctor will be down over the week-end to make thorough physical examinations of all players.

ATLANTA Y WINS IN STATE EVENT

ATHENS, Ga., March 2.—Atlanta and Augusta gained two new champions in the state Y. M. C. A. junior basketball tournament here Saturday, while Columbus retained one of the two titles it was defending.

The Atlanta Y. M. C. A. Triangles, who were second to Savannah in the Junior (17-and-under) class last year, captured the divisional championship with a 32-21 victory over the Savannah Crackers. The Crackers came to the tournament after beating out the Jefferson A. C. state champions for two years, for the right to represent Savannah. In preliminary games, Atlanta ran wild over Columbus, 31 to 14, and Savannah scored an easy victory over Augusta, 33 to 10.

Augusta came back in the second half to defeat the Atlanta Pioneers, 35 to 21, in the prep (14-and-under) division. It was the second straight year that the Pioneers were runners-up. In the first round, the coaches in B group, Atlanta defeated the defending Columbus quintet, 26 to 15, and Augusta edged by Athens, 32 to 29.

Carter's Columbus Midgets had their own way in the 12-and-under class to win their second straight title. They swamped Augusta, 25 to 7, while the Athens Cubs were running away with the Atlanta Comrades, 45 to 22, then defeated Atlanta for the crown, 37 to 24.

State Basketball. JASPER GIRLS WIN. ELLIJAY, Ga., March 3.—In the finals of the ninth district western division girls' basketball tournament played here Saturday night, Jasper, the defending champions, in B group, completely outclassed the high-rated Canton quintet in a hard-fought game, 32-19. The champions were never in danger after getting a 10-3 lead in the first quarter. The only threat of the losers was to knot the score at 2-2 in the first minute of play. The smooth teamwork, characterized by brilliant passing, of the Jasper girls was easily the outstanding feature of the tournament, three of the players making the tournament all-star team in B group.

In group Nelson, also defending champions, defeated Epworth in the hardest fought game of the tournament. Three of the players were also chosen for the tournament all-star team in C group.

Intense sidings of the finals: tournament winners are both Pickens county girls, Jasper and Canton. J. W. Tipples, of Jasper, and D. B. Carroll, of Canton, were college classmates and are brothers-in-law.

Manager Paul Richards Plans To Run Pitchers Into Condition

All in the Game
—by Jack Troy

Not His Fault

SAVANNAH, Ga., March 3.—Ernie Lombardi, the lumbering Cincinnati Reds' catcher, has a supporter in Babe Dahlgren, Yankee first baseman.

The Babe saw all the details of the famous "sit down strike" in the ninth inning of the final game of the World Series between the Reds and the Yanks.

"There's nothing much a man can do about a flock of runs scoring when he has the wind knocked out of him," Dahlgren told this correspondent in Atlanta early this morning.

"Here's what actually happened: Charley Keller, who is built like a bull and is very fast, charged into the plate as Lombardi reached for the throw. Lombardi was off balance. He had no way to protect himself and Charley nailed him.

"There was no malice in the play. He simply was getting to the plate. Lombardi went down, of course, and it might have been fitting had the umpire counted over him like referees do in prize fights.

"I guess you saw where Bucky Walters admitted he should have rushed up to the plate and recovered the ball. If he had fielded his position, DiMaggio probably wouldn't have scored.

"At any rate, Lombardi wasn't just sitting there. He couldn't get up. As I mentioned, that Keller hits you for keeps. Old Schnoz has been unduly criticized. He really was an important factor in getting Cincinnati into the series. But I guess it's easy to forget a thing like that," Dahlgren declared.

Roomies Nolen Richardson, whose guest Dahlgren is in Atlanta, has had some famous roommates in his years of baseball.

Nolen roomed with George McQuinn and later, Babe Dahlgren, at Newark.

Strange how things work out sometimes in baseball. On that famous '37 Newark team, Dahlgren was the third baseman, George McQuinn, who visited the Richards' during the big snow in Atlanta, played first.

Dahlgren always has been a first baseman. But he played third that season because Newark needed to plug a gap.

After Lou Gehrig was forced into retirement, Dahlgren was secured to play first base. The Browns drafted McQuinn. This past winter the Yanks had an idea they would like to get McQuinn but Clark Griffith put through the rule that the pennant winning team can't deal with clubs in the same league for purposes of strengthening.

McQuinn is no better first baseman than Dahlgren. He just happens to be a somewhat better hitter. Both boys are fancy Dans in the field.

It will be recalled that Dahlgren hits for distance now and then. He socked some homers in the World Series.

And he believes he is a .300 hitter. "I'd rather forget about that .260 batting average of last year. Because I'm going to have that .300 average this season," the Babe insisted.

Character Harry Richardson, Nolen's brother, played baseball with Nick (Red) Brown, one of the Southern league umpires.

"Nick is quite a character," said Harry Richardson. "If President Trammell Scott puts him with Steamboat Johnson there will not be a more colorful pair of umpires in baseball.

"Nick, for instance, will race a runner down the base path and actually will slide with him. He'll slide either head or feet first. Doesn't make any difference. Then he gets to his feet and calls the play in a grandiose manner. He's a card, Nick is."

Old Scene The same old scene in the same old setting is being re-enacted once again in the Savannah hotel. The boys are checking in to start spring practice tomorrow.

They're all eager to start. They'll have a lot of the old pepper tomorrow. It will be difficult for Manager Paul Richards and his aides, Dick Neihaus and Guy Green, to keep them from overdoing it on the first day.

The Crackers have an unusual crop of good rookies in camp this year. And so it will not be surprising to see the Crackers open the season with about the same number of rookies as graced the squad last season.

And it might be a surprisingly good ball club. Manager Paul Richards did wonders with a lot of youngsters last year. A third place finish is not the goal, however. The Crackers are thinking in terms of another pennant.

Wouldn't Trade Alex

Lampe Praises Play of McCaskill; Georgia Expresses Wish To Meet Champion Kentucky Wildcats After a Rest.

By JOHNNY BRADBERRY.

Elmer Lampe, the tall man of Athens, who has been coaching Georgia's basketball team for the past two seasons, was a bit disheartened Saturday night in Knoxville. His Bulldogs had just been defeated by Kentucky in the finals of the Southeastern conference so one couldn't expect Elmer to be very cheerful.

However, he did spruce up a bit when one of the fellows sitting around the hotel room mentioned Alex McCaskill. Lampe smiled and heaped words of praise upon the shoulders of the tow-headed Macon boy.

McCaskill captured the hearts of the fans, coaches and officials by his brilliant play during the tournament. In the vote for the all-conference team, Alex received every first place vote except one and he was placed on the second five in that.

HARD TO REPLACE. "I was a bit disappointed in Alex's play during the first part of the season," Lampe said, "but he certainly did come through in the last half. I don't think I would have traded him for any other player in the tournament. It will be hard for us to replace him next year."

By no means is this piece of the paper intended as an alibi for the Bulldogs. But since it's sometimes interesting to look back and if about things, a couple of breaks in Georgia's favor

LAWSON LITTLE AND BEN HOGAN ARE BEATEN, 1 UP

Guldahl-Snead, Runyan-Smith, Demaret-Goggin Teams Win.

By LARRY ROLLINS.

CORAL GABLES, Fla., March 3.—The diminutive Canadian team of Stanley Horne and Jules Huot knocked out three-seeded Lawson Little and Ben Hogan, one up, to interrupt a parade of favorites through the first round today of the $5,000 international four-ball golf tournament.

Horne and Huot, two down after 18 holes, teamed beautifully to come from behind in the day's tightest match.

Ralph Guldahl and Sam Snead, back in the par-shattering form that won the tournament last year, trounced Johnny Bulla and Frank Walker, 7 and 6.

Paul Runyan and Horton Smith, the second seeded entry, had little difficulty eliminating Lloyd Mangrum and Ed Oliver, 4 and 3.

Jimmy Demaret, the hottest man on the winter circuit, and Willie Goggin romped to an 8-and-7 triumph over Vic Ghezzi and Jimmy Hines.

E. J. (Dutch) Harrison and Clayton Heafner, considered by many the real dark-horse team, set a 12-under-par pace, the warmest of the round, to drub Johnny Revolta and Marvin Stahl, 5 and 3.

Heafner closed out the match in sensational style with an eagle 3, chipping into the cup after overhauling the green with a drive and a twirl on the 550-yard hole.

Walter Hagen and Gene Scraper, the sentimental favorites of a large gallery, faded out, 6 and 5, before Billy Burke and Craig Wood. National Open Champion Byron Nelson and Harold (Jug) McSpaden, 2001, also faded.

Bobby Jones Selects Demaret or Haefner To Win Masters'

SHARP

Shootin'

By Al Sharp

You remember the day Bob Jones shot his third 63 at East Lake? Well, R. A. McCord, Dr. W. C. Warren and Hal Sargent were playing with him.

Dr. Warren and Mr. McCord were having a field day. They were kidding the "daylights" out of each other. And it finally got to the point where McCord was ready to do anything to "get back" at the doctor, who uses paragraphs instead of words for heckling purposes.

Came the eleventh hole. Warren was 2 feet from home. McCord was 30. They finally got down to cases and, since both were the same number of strokes at the time, McCord bet just for fun that he would beat the doctor.

Of course, he sank that 30-foot putt and the doctor missed. But that's just half of it. The same thing happened on the next hole for two birdies in a row.

And, for the first time in history, according to available reports, the doctor was speechless.

Odd part about it, though, is the fact that Bob, laughing at his companions' arguments, weathered the shower of words to equal his record score.

"Maybe it's a good idea for me to break my concentration," remarked Jones when we mentioned the story to him.

At least, it worked that day.

Charles McGeehe and Jimmy Roosevelt had arranged to play golf when the President's son came here recently, but the weather stopped that.

"I hope he'll come back soon and we'll get to play," McGeehe said before teeing off for a round yesterday. "He's the only golfer I know I can beat."

They played together in Washington.

Golfers were swinging in the rain yesterday morning, and Howard Beckett, Capital City pro, had to put on his raincoat to give a lesson.

Members got a kick out of watching Beckett wrapped up to his ears, giving Mills Lane pointers. Lane recently moved here from Savannah.

Fulton High Plays Athens Team For N. G. I. C. Cage Crown Tonight

VISITING QUINT TO BE FAVORED IN TITLE CLASH

Host Team Has Displayed Ability To Upset Dopesters in Past Games.

By CHARLIE ROBERTS.

Tonight is the night those inhositable hosts of the N. G. I. C. basketball tournament, Fulton High's scrappy and highly effective five, will attempt to trim Athens High's rangy quintet for the 1940 crown. The winner of tonight's melee will concede the Russell Wildcats as conference diadem wearers. Fulton High gym is the place. Eight o'clock is the time.

Athens must be considered the favorite in view of its height advantage and its general all-around team play, retrieving ability and well balanced outfit, but the Fulton High hustlers have been so highly effective in the play thus far, one does not feel too sure to count them out as the ultimate titlist.

The red clay skyscrapers from the home of the Southeast conference runners-up, Georgia University's Bulldogs, have "whopped" the daylight out of LaGrange, upstart of tourney favorites, Elberton and North Fulton's fast-breaking Bulldogs, on successive nights, after drawing a first-round bye. LaGrange was downed 42-33, and the dashing Bulldogs by a 26-to-17 count.

On the other hand Fulton trimmed Griffin, 27 to 20; Decatur, 38-18, and Marist, tourney surprise package, 29-25, the latter in a stubbornly fought, bitter battle Saturday night in the semi-finals.

Against the superb all-around play of Athens the Fulton Red Birds will pit tournament high-scoring Charlie Scruggs, sub forward McMillan, who was hero of the Marist game, and a well-knit attack. And, regardless of which team cops the cup and coveted N. G. I. C. sparkling crown, Fulton High will always be remembered as the poorest host of all time. The guests always get the gristle and the host all the gravy. Always they refused to give up the bigger or better portion for hospitality's sake.

He's My Boy Joe!

Nolen Richards Claims Gordon Is His Protege; Sees Great Future for Charlie Keller, One of His Former Teammates.

By IRVIN McBRAYER.

Nolen Richards, who has played pro baseball from the southern plains of Texas to the chill regions of Canada, likes to talk of his ex-teammates who are making headlines in the big time. He has just signed his Indianapolis contract. Terms were okay.

Richards, who has seen service with Detroit and New York in the American league, and Cincinnati in the National circuit, is keeping a fatherly eye on Joe Gordon, sensational young second baseman of the champion New York Yankees. He calls Gordon his protege.

Nolen and Joe former the key-stone combination of the great Newark champions of the International league in 1927. And Joe readily gives the Atlanta boy all the credit for making him a great fielding star.

Richards is the property of the Cincinnati Reds and will be at the shortstop position with Indianapolis this year. The International team is a Red farm.

JOHN HILL ON THIRD. Nolen will have Johnny Hill, former Cracker star, within kicking distance, as John will be over on the hot corner for the Indians.

"I'm sure Hill will make us a good man this year," says Nolen. "We couldn't get him out last year when he played with Milwaukee."

Richards has seen hundreds of ball players travel to the majors in his 13 years in the pro game, but he rates Charlie Gehring, Detroit second baseman, as the best he's ever played with. He and Charlie played together with Detroit in '29 and '32.

"But Charlie Keller, young Yankee outfielder, may put them all in the shade before he's through," says Nolen. "Keller was with us at Newark in 1937 and that boy had everything. He has an ideal build, and can lose the ball or hit just a safety. He is a great fielder and can run like a deer."

Incidentally, Keller was a star of the world series last year between the Yankees and Reds. He all but wrecked the National club with his powerful clubbing.

TOPNOTCH FIELDER. Richards is generally acclaimed one of the greatest fielders in the game today. He always turns in the best fielding average with any club, either major or minor. His lifetime batting average is .285.

Nolen began his pro career with Fort Worth in 1927 after finishing school at the University of Georgia. He stayed with the Cats two years. In '29 he was with Detroit and Toronto and was back and forth with those two clubs through 1934. Newark and the Yankees had his services in '36 and '37, then Cincinnati purchased him from Baltimore. Last year he played with the Reds and wound up at Indianapolis.

The 34-year-old fielding wizard will report for spring work around the 18th of March. At present he is employed by an Atlanta department store.

ANAHEIM, Cal., March 3.—Bunching six fielding drills in the first three innings the Philadelphia Athletics opened their spring exhibition schedule today by scoring a 6-to-3 victory over Seattle of the Pacific Coast league before an overflow crowd of 6,000.

Aided by two wild throws by Benny McCoy and Bill Lillard, Seattle scored all their runs off George Caster in the first three innings, but thereafter was held in check by Herman Besse and Red Heusser. Besse was particularly impressive, furling in a no-hit performance in his three-inning appearance.

Bob Johnson slammed out three singles in three trips to the plate. McCoy, second baseman who got a bonus of $45,000 for signing the A's after being declared a free agent, went hitless in two times up.

Before the game Manager Connie Mack announced the A's would return to Anaheim to train in 1941.

Grand Slammer Admits He Is Tacking Golf More Seriously Now.

By WILLIAM J. TUCKER.

United Press Correspondent.

The "grand-slammer" of 10 years ago, Bobby Jones, is taking "a little more seriously" his annual gesture to the game he forsook after hogging the major titles from 1923 to 1930.

Once each spring, at the Masters' Invitation tournament in Augusta, Bobby leaves his Atlanta law office and takes to the fairways with the best of the current pros and amateurs.

"And," as he puts it, "I'm usually sunk at the end of the first nine holes."

But this year the former baron of the bunkers has been putting in long hours of practice for the Masters', which will be shot over the 72-hole medal route on the Augusta national course, April 4-7.

"I've been taking golf a little more seriously lately and hope to make a better showing," Jones said. "But I still haven't been mildly challenged in the decade since his retirement from tournament."

Bobby has been practicing for the Masters' at his old stomping grounds, the East Lake Club, where par is 71 over a tough layout.

"I've been shooting around 67 and 68," he said, "but once I jumped up to 75." And as an afterthought: "I got a 63 last week."

Jones emphasized, however, that those scores in the 60's come only on a good golfer in practice but in an open tournament, when the blue chips are on the line and the competitive pressure mounting, it is much harder to better par.

Whom did Jones like for the Masters? He had a quartet of favorites on the links have not been there, Bobby favored Jimmy Demaret, who was leading money winner so far this year, and Clayton Haefner, the corner from North Carolina, among the pros, and National Amateur Champion Bud Ward, and former British Amateur, Charlie Yates among the Simon-pures.

Jones has been playing this winter with his fellow-townsmen, Yates, and said the smiling, happy-go-lucky Charlie was on his game.

3,74 Golfers Play Here in Two Days Saturday and Sunday Rounds Produce Man Features; Luke Barnes Fires 29 at Key.

Atlanta golfers walked the distance around the earth over the week end, and almost that far. It isn't hard to arrive at that figure of 25,000 miles. Officials at Atlanta's 15 clubs reported that 3,74 rounds were played on Saturday and Sunday—the prettiest and best week end of the year as far as golf courses were concerned.

Experts estimate that a golfer walks almost 8 miles every time he plays 18 holes on a course of average length. You don't have to get out a slide rule to find the answer after you have these facts. And if you're interested in statistics, here are the number of rounds reported by the clubs:

Black Rock, 412; East Lake, 300; Candler Park, 250; Ansley Park, 180; Druid Hills, 195; West End, 90; Capital City, 275; Inglewood, 71; Bobby Jones, 248; Piedmont, 298; Key, 282; Forest Hills, 150; College Park, 100; White, 165, and Lidia Springs, 152.

All these rounds were bound to produce some low scores. For instance, Luke Barnes shot a 5 under par 29 at James L. Key to tie the course record, which has been equaled by several players. That happened yesterday after Barnes had missed a putt for a 29 on the last hole Saturday. Luke had seven 3's in a row Saturday and 6 straight yesterday, starting at No. 3. In tying the non-competitive record, Barnes had an eagle 3 on No. 8 and birdies on the first, fifth and ninth holes. He was playing with Charles Barnes, Max Smith and Pro Charlie Edens.

McCoy shoots 31. Bob McCoy clipped three strokes from par for a 31 at Piedmont. Gene Gailard played in the morning rain and scored a 71 on Druid Hills' 27 layout. Dr. C. Y. Strickler turned up with a 33-34—67, four shots under Capital City's par. He played with Miss Margaret Maddux, who had a 79, and Miss Dorothy Kirby, who scored a 78.

KID BROWN CARDS 70. James (Kid) Brown, former state champion, registered a 33-37—70 on Black Rock's par 71 course. Mr. Par whipped the players at West End, where Mel Clark scored a 5 over par, 73. Leonard Mayo, who hadn't played in four months, had the best score of the year at Candler Park—a 2 under par 30.

EAST LAKE DOGGIFTE. A foursome composed of J. B. McConnell, W. S. Station, Ben Conyers and J. S. Stewart yesterday won the dogfight at East Lake with a 114. Fourteen foursomes competed.

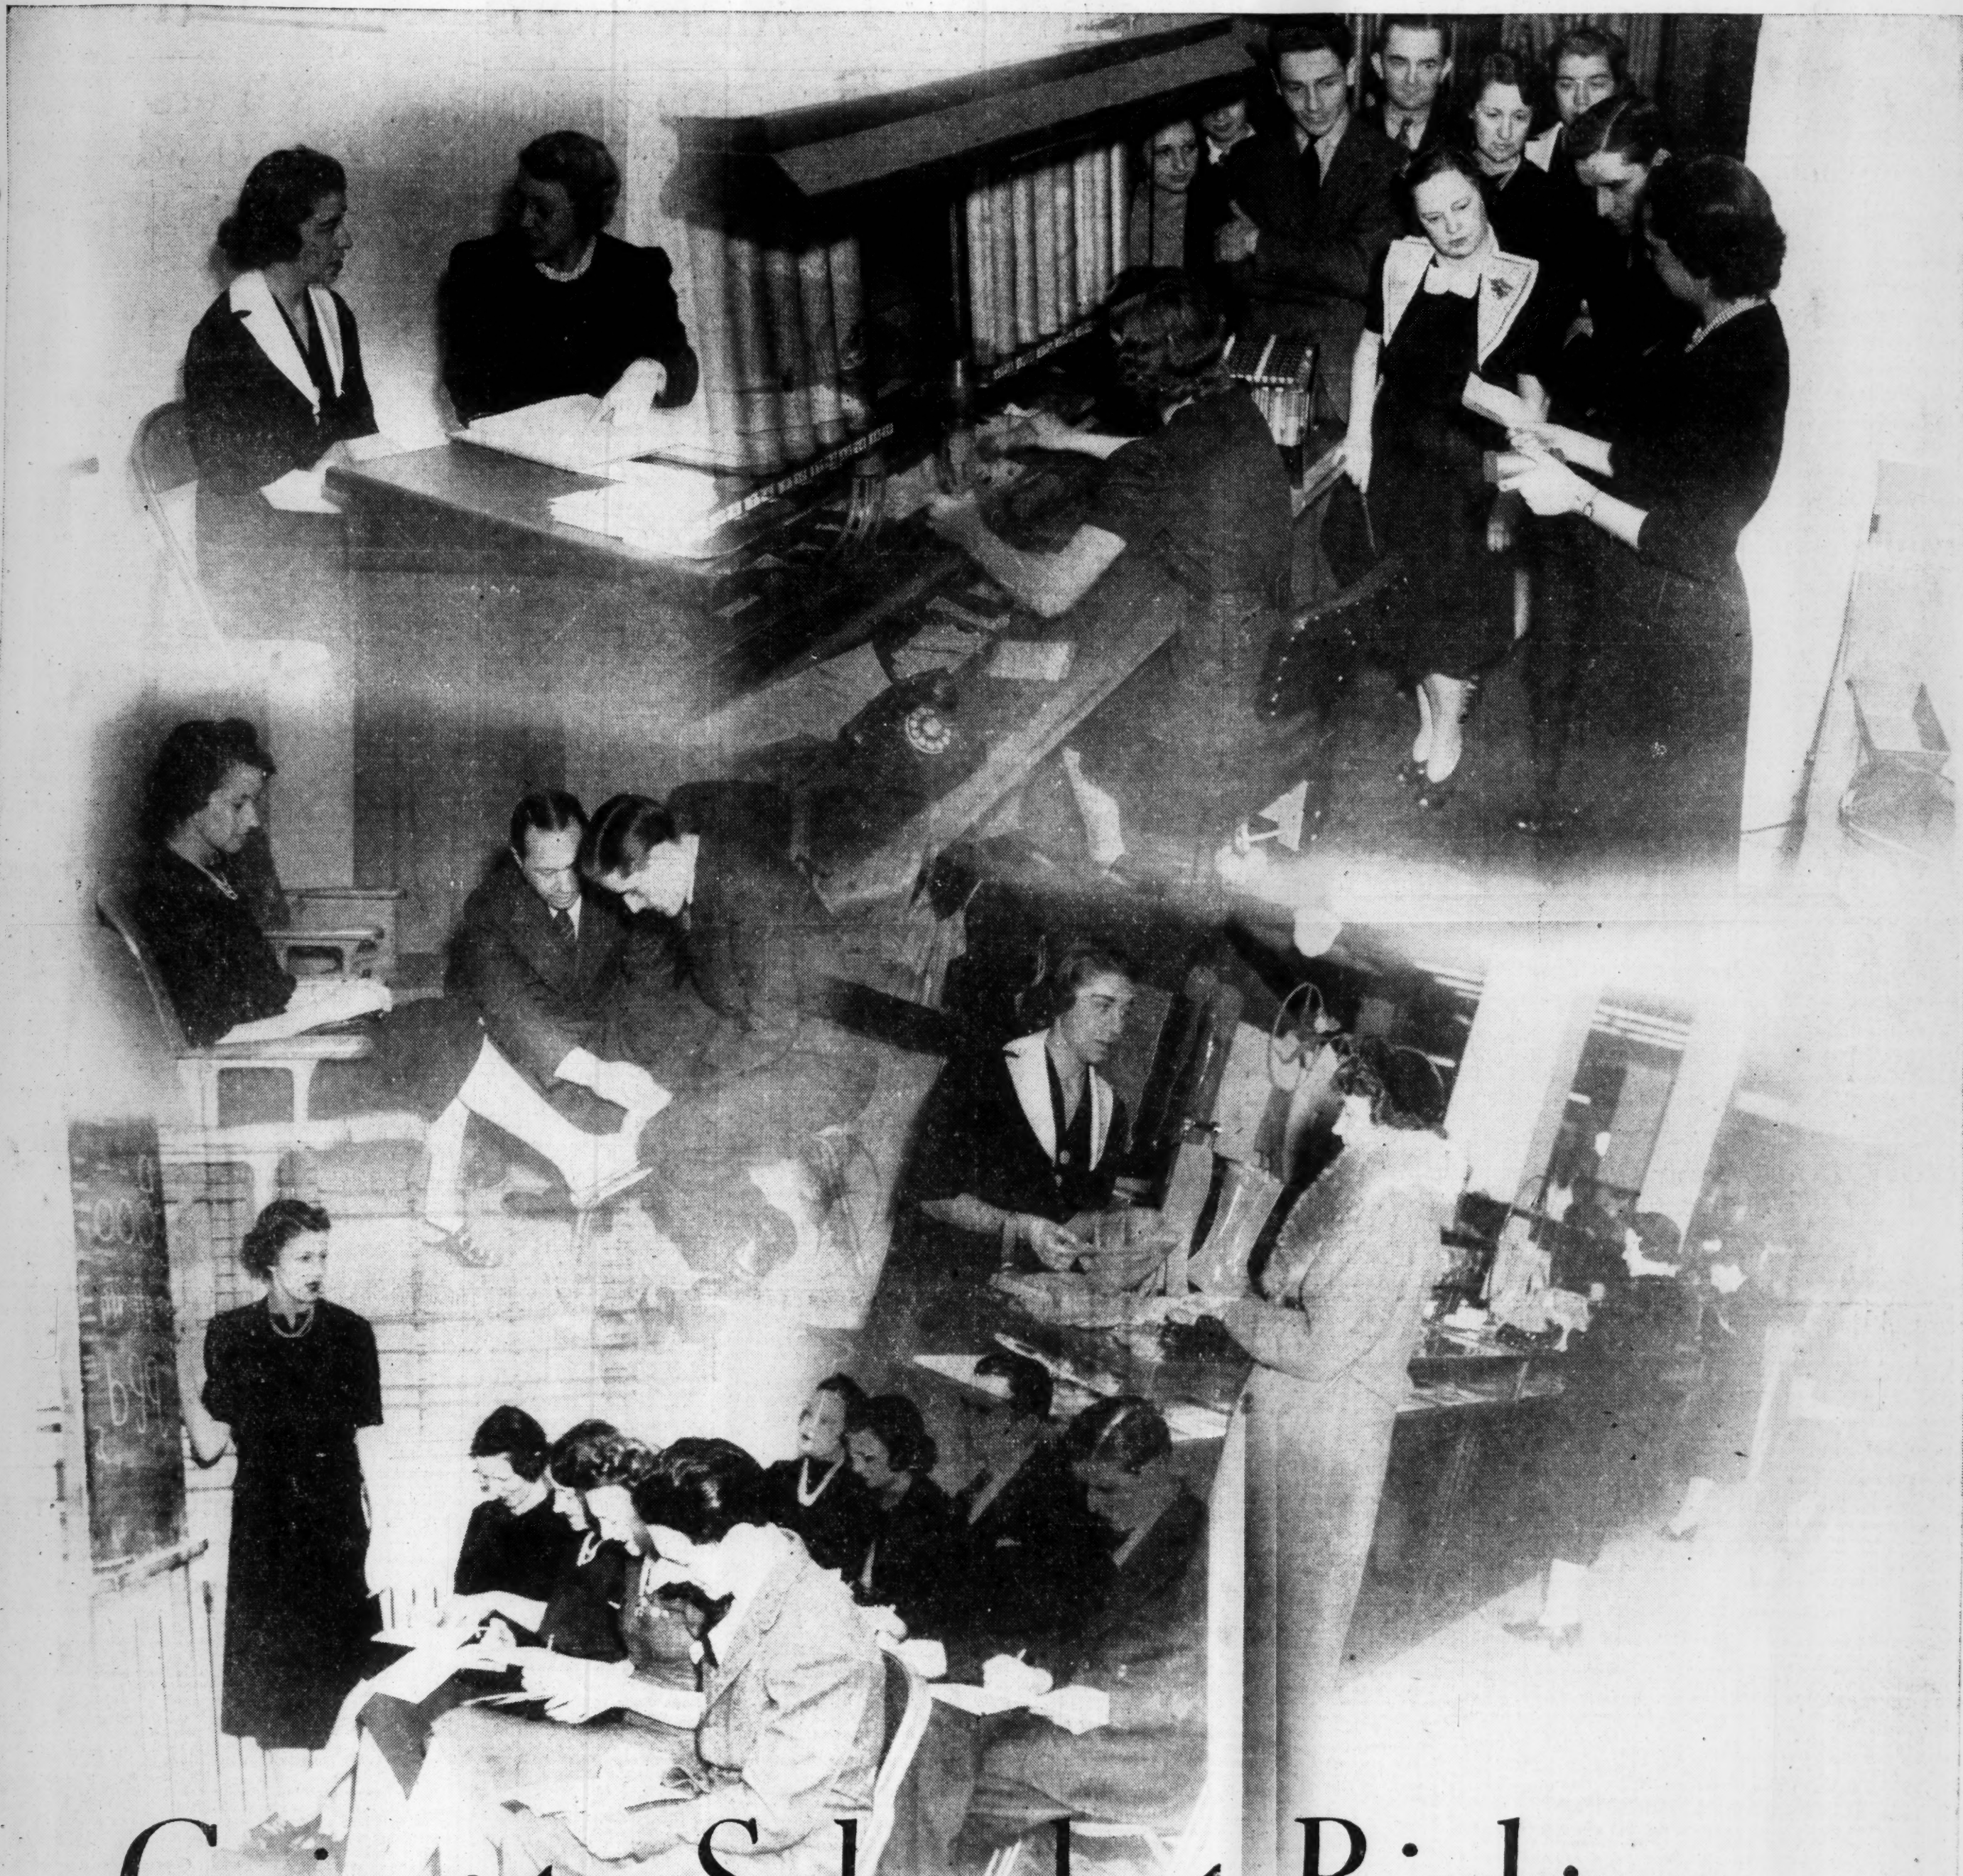

In second place were Cliff Eley, Dr. J. R. Mitchell, W. D. Owen and D. E. Allen, who had 117. Two teams tied at 119. On one team were Pete Barnes, A. P. McElroy, A. C. Spinks and L. R. McElroy, and on the other, George Sargent Jr., F. D. J. J. McConnehy and I. P. Wilhoit.

Other leading teams were: Hundred and twenty, Alan Yates, S. M. Hall, C. W. Lawson

WEST END BOGEY. Three hit the blind bogey number at West End. Registering 74's were Roy Brown, Tip Schier and Paul Ford. Mrs. A. J. Smith was second with a 71.

CANDLER BOGEY. R. E. Wise won the blind bogey at Candler Park with 72. R. C. McDonald was second with a 70 and J. M. Mandot third with an 80.

The Candler Park Association will elect officers tonight at 7:30 o'clock in a meeting at the clubhouse. Spain Davis is the president.

MY DAY: Miami's Gaiety Is Contagious

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

GOLDEN BEACH, Fla., Friday—I forgot to tell you yesterday that we were extremely frivolous on Wednesday night and went to see where Miami's four hundred disport themselves in the evening at the Royal Palm Club. It is very attractive and there is excellent food and one of the best floor shows I have ever seen. You look through the windows to the lighted palms and think the morning sun is shining on the green, and then have to remind yourself that it was 9 p. m. when you came in.

There are plenty of charming ladies in the show and all are graceful and wear attractive costumes. The De Marco dance team was featured Wednesday night and was excellent. Mr. Tony Martin sang, and prefaced his singing by telling us that, like many others, his evening's salary would hardly repay what he had left behind at the race track in the afternoon.

I enjoyed his singing and the management came afterwards to ask if he could come up and have his photograph taken with our group. I was very glad to have an opportunity to meet him. The one thing which seemed different from almost any night club that I had ever visited, was the frequent flash of a camera bulb. It seemed to me that everyone on the floor had been photographed before the evening was over. There is a spirit of carefree gaiety here which is contagious.

This afternoon we went over to visit some friends. I sat enthralled while the gentleman of the family told us stories of some of the quaint characters who have come his way in a long and adventurous life. A hospital when a tidal wave wrecked most of the city of Galveston, Texas, many years ago. It reminded me of some of the sights I had seen along the Atlantic coast after the tidal wave of last year.

I have just been told about the Sachs' foundation, which was started with the idea of encouraging young interior decorators and which is now contemplating including branches of musical training and fashion design in their annual competition. The competition for interior decoration is open to students in accepted institutions in Greater New York.

The design for the room receiving the first award is executed in every detail and open to the public. The current one is now ready at 505 Eighth avenue, New York city. I think as many people as possible who are interested in developing new vocations for young people, should go to see what these young decorators have done. It is not only from the point of view of opening new opportunities that this foundation is doing a good work, it is also going to do much to educate the taste of the public, and we know that only through the desire of the public can good work be accepted.

It is only an error of judgment to make a mistake, but it argues an infirmity of character to adhere to it when discovered. The Chinese say, "The glory is not in never falling, but in rising every time you fall."—Bovee.

Hints to Etiquette.

Nothing shows a person's bad manners and lack of thought for others more than showing obvious annoyance or ill-temperament when being beaten in a friendly game of cards.

Pajamas in Frilly Victorian Style

By Barbara Bell.

Pajamas in this quaint, frilly Victorian manner are so popular that we've created this brand-new design for you, with a cool, plain square neckline that you'll appreciate as the weather gets warmer. You'll be delighted with 1929-B because it fits unusually well on the shoulders, and the trousers are exceptionally well tailored. But of course their chief charm is the flattering, Victorian look of them, with cute gathered pockets, which, like the yoke, are frill-trimmed.

They're so easy to make that you'll have your first pair finished almost before you know it—and you'll never be satisfied with just one pair like this. Choose batiste, lingerie, crepe, satin or seersucker.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1929-B is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Corresponding bust measurements 30, 32, 34, 36 and 38. Size 14 (32) requires 4 1/4 yards of 36-inch material without nap; 2 yards trimming.

Price of pattern 15 cents, book 15 cents. Do not send stamps. Mail orders to Barbara Bell Pattern Department, The Constitution, Atlanta, Ga.

Use a Cream That Suits Your Skin

By Lillian Mae.

Cleansing creams are just as necessary to the well-groomed woman—the woman who insists upon a clear, smooth and healthy complexion, as the air she breathes.

But just cleansing cream won't do the proper work. You must have the type of cream that best suits your very own skin.

A New York cosmetic house has sent me samples of three different cleansing creams, each manufactured for a different texture of skin. There's an emulsified cream for skins that are dry, thin or sensitive. That is very definitely NOT for a normal or an oily skin.

But one of the three is manufactured especially for normal or only slightly oily skin. Then the third is a liquefying cleansing cream—very fine for either the normal or very definitely oily skin—never for one that is dry.

These are such good creams that you may use the one that suits your own skin, with confidence, as well as with a sense of luxury. At the regular price, the creams are well worth the money. But for a few days I am informed that a half-pound jar of either of the three may be purchased for one dollar.

My advice to you is that you stock up now, while the price is practically half the usual amount. You need so much cleansing cream that you'll be glad to reach up and find a second or third jar of this very lovely cleansing emollient on your toilet shelf.

Phone me and I'll tell you the name of the cream and where it may be purchased during these few days at the unusual price. Write me if you do not live in Atlanta, inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.

Q. Please describe some methods of preparing canned baked beans for supper dishes.

A. (1) Place beans in individual beanpots or casseroles, cover with slices of bacon and bake until the bacon is crisp and the beans are well heated. (2) Place the beans in green pepper cases, cover with bacon and bake until the peppers are soft and the bacon is crisp. (3) Add diced cold roast pork and catsup to the beans and heat. (4) Add a grated onion to the beans and serve them on a hot platter garnished with slices of grilled or fried tomato.

Q. Our 3-year-old daughter has developed the habit of crying bitterly at bedtime no matter how late she has been permitted to stay up. She demands constant attention until we retire. How can she be broken of this habit?

A. You must steel yourself to the task of putting her to bed and shutting the bedroom door at a regular hour each night. She should be put to bed at 6:30 or 7 o'clock. Simply undress her, give her a bath and her supper and put her to bed. Show no concern or excitement. If she is accustomed to a light, have a very low light and give her a favorite soft toy to take to bed. It is important that you do not re-enter the room until she is asleep.

Why Worry About a Thing That May Never Happen?

By Dr. William Brady.

Among many astonishing statements made in an article published in the Journal of the American Medical Association (February 5, 1938) was this:

"All physicians know that the blue ointment (metallic mercury in finely dispersed form in fat) employed as an antipsyphilitic agent is readily absorbed through the skin."

Maybe it is presumptuous to say so, but still I am a physician, a member of Erie County Medical Society, New York State Medical Society, and a member or fellow of the American Medical Association, and I not only do not know, but I am reasonably certain that no other physician knows that mercury is absorbed through the unbroken skin. The truth is that few physicians today prescribe or administer mercury or any other remedy byunction, that is, by applying the medicine to or by rubbing it on or into the skin—that is, any remedy to produce systemic effect.

If "all physicians" know that mercury so applied is absorbed through the skin, then this controversy I have been carrying on with the self-styled "scientific authorities" in reference to the impermeability of the healthy skin is now settled, and all physicians, not just some of them, know something that isn't so.

A case of mercury poisoning from application of blue ointment to the skin was reported by a New England physician in the Journal of the American Medical Association about ten or twelve years ago. The physician, a woman, attributed the poisoning to inhalation of the mercury vaporized or volatilized by the heat of the body, and the circumstances under which the poisoning occurred bore her out in that view. Maybe we need more women in medicine.

"Lead poisoning is too well known to be discussed here," declared the doctor whose article I cited. If that implied that painters absorb lead through the skin the notion is not shared by many physicians today. Some such idea may have seemed plausible enough long ago. The present view of physicians is that painters get lead poisoning only by inhaling particles of lead in the dust raised when old paint is scraped or sandpapered dry, and by swallowing some dust and by swallowing paint when they are careless enough to eat without first washing their hands when they are on a job.

Printers and others get lead poisoning by inhaling fumes of molten lead in minute quantity but over a prolonged period at their occupation. There is no evidence, and probably little if any belief among intelligent physicians today, that anyone in any circumstances is ever poisoned with lead through the skin. It is just another little thing not to worry about.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Whether to Chew or Eschew.

Please give the present view of the medical profession in regard to meat diet and appendicitis and other diseases of the digestive organs. Once, I think, you cited some opinion to the effect that excessive meat eating predisposes to appendicitis, colitis and other common diseases.—(J. F. F.)

Answer—A diet in which cooked meat is included in quantity is likely to be deficient in vitamin B complex. Constant deficiency in B complex probably accounts for much of the digestive disturbance, constipation, so-called colitis or colon derangement. I doubt that meat eating in itself is a factor of any importance. As for chewing meat, suit your own taste or convenience—it digests well enough even if you prefer to wolf it down in chunks.

Rheumatiz.

I found so much wisdom concealed in your talks on "rheumatiz" that I wrote for your booklet three years ago. I write now to thank you particularly for the excellent outline of management you gave at the end of the booklet. In my practice I have followed your outline with gratifying success.—(M. D.)

Answer—Thank you, doctor. I am glad to send anyone on request a copy of the booklet "The Ills Called Rheumatism." Inclose ten cents coin and a 1-cent stamped envelope bearing your address.

Removing Adhesive Plaster.

Please tell me something that will help remove adhesive plaster from the skin.—(H. F.)

Answer—Common kerosene.

Don't Dwell On It.

Would appreciate if A. W. B. would state just what the operation for glaucoma consists of, the length of time it takes, and so forth.—(A. N. S.)

Answer—A. W. B. was the patient and hence is not competent to give such information. It would be superfluous information anyway. If you have glaucoma or think you have it, consult your oculist and don't just fret about it.

Can Isa Miranda Prove Her Acting Ability?

By Sheila Graham.

HOLLYWOOD, March 3.—The nuzzle of Isa Miranda. Has Hollywood given her a bad deal, or is she merely an actress who didn't have enough of what it takes to stay in Hollywood? Isa was well-known in Europe before Paramount brought her here for the title role in "Zaza." She was allowed to wrestle six months with the American language before it was decided that "Zaza" would be better in the acting hands of Claudette Colbert. Following this fiasco, Isa was given the lead in "Hotel Imperial," a turkey of the old school. Then came the current "Adventures in Diamonds," in which all the early publicity tended to compare her with Marlene Dietrich. Comparison is always dangerous, if not suicidal, in Hollywood.

So, according to Miranda, she has not yet been given a proper chance to prove to American audiences that she is glamorous, beautiful and as good an actress as she proved herself abroad. On behalf of Hollywood, it must be written that Miss Miranda took her language handicap too lightly, surrounding herself with non-American speaking Italians. It is hard to do your acting best when thinking all the time of the right way to speak letters and vowels.

Pa Joad—Russell Simpson—sat behind me at the swank Hollywood "Grape of Wrath" premiere. Guess what he was wondering? Yes—white tie and tails! I'm glad things turned out all right for the Joad family after all. Claudette Colbert, Charles Boyer, Ronald Colman, Vivien Leigh, Laurence Olivier and Basil Rathbone have been pledged to give the proceeds of one broadcast to the Franco-British relief fund. And to raise a minimum of $50,000 this year, most of the above-named receive $5,000 per broadcast. ... All future studio publicity on Richard Greene will shy away from his dimples and round-faced, baby look. The emphasis will be transferred to rugged masculinity. ... Norma Shearer's film output is the least of any star—one picture a year for the past three years. ... Bette Davis found herself a new beau at the Tailwaggers' "academy award" party—5-year-old Larry Simms, who flung his arms around Bette and put up a terrific protest when they tried to

I wonder, why do they wait until the picture is in production for this sort of thing?

SALLY FORTH Says:

Many Atlantans Featured In Junior League Magazine

PROVING there is no Junior League type, the publication of this well-known organization in its March issue presents photographs and write-ups of its professional members. The Atlanta Junior League members who were selected to appear in this feature for their professional activities were Helen Hawkins Clarke, Marianna Goldsmith Knox and Margaret Stovall. Helen is a landscape architect, Marianna is in charge of public relations for a leading department store, and Margaret is secretary to the president of Oglethorpe University and secretary of Oglethorpe Press. Accompanying the photographs and explanations are clever pen sketches of the heroines drawn by one of the league husbands, Lombard Jones.

Scattered throughout the magazine are attractive photographs of Atlantans at play, some of which are the work of Ruth Orburn Candler, excellent amateur photographer. Posing at the Orange Bowl game in Miami are Russell and Catherine Haverly Bellman, Jim and Josephine Crawford Robinson, Kenneth and Angel Allen Campbell, and Alfred and Louise Candler Eldredge, who now reside in the "Sunshine City."

Cornelia Orme Healey proudly displays her "haul" from a hunting trip, while another leaguer, Catherine Smith Nunnally, an accomplished artist, is photographed at work. Bright Bickelstaff and Emily Woodruff, of Columbus, are draped in leis in tropical Hawaiian fashion while they pose with their hostess, Sarah Simms Edge, on a recent visit to Honolulu. Another snapshot with a tropical background shows Eugenia Candler Wilson and her daughter, Lucy Wilson, enjoying the warm Caribbean surf of Puerto Rico, where they reside.

WHEN baby Susan Pegram returns to her home on Arden road tomorrow she will be encoined in a cell blue nursery furnished entirely in the same shade and with matching draperies.

The tiny future belle, who is the two-week-old daughter of Bob and Nancy Frederick Pegram, is named for her grandmother, Mrs. R. B. Pegram Sr. Her maternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Claude Frederick.

The feature of the dainty nursery is the mahogany bed in which three generations of the Pegram family slept during the babyhood. Robert B. Pegram, Susan's grandfather, and his brothers and sisters were the first to sleep in the crib and since that time the cradle has held all the Pegram children and grandchildren.

FROM Duke University, in Durham, N. C., drifts the news that Frank J. Henry, daughter of the Frank J. Henry, of this city, is among seniors elected to form the queen's court at the May Day celebration to be held at the college on May 4.

Barbara is an outstanding student at Duke, having served on the student government council, and having been a member of the freshman commission of the Y. W. C. A. She is a popular member of the Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority, and is president of the senior class. Incidentally, she was also president of her class during her sophomore year, which proves her ability as a leader.

A member of the Y. W. C. A. cabinet, the Atlanta belle maintains a high scholastic average and her name appears frequently on the dean's list.

-STRANGE CARGO-

Verne Tells Julie He Will Slip Away From Prison To See Her

By HALSEY RAINES.

INSTALLMENT I.

The hot tropical sun beat down relentlessly. It was an effort to walk from one side of the street to the other and any kind of manual labor became a real ordeal.

The convicts of Santa Margola prison were schooled to that grim discipline. Any loafing on the job meant corporal punishment—or perhaps a fortnight in solitary confinement. Life was hard among the poor folk of French Guiana; it was vindictive and hopeless among the prison inmates. Most of them, their bodies glistening with torrid beads of perspiration, went about their daily tasks in a spirit of beaten animal servitude. The few whose independence hadn't been completely crushed cherished a wild hope of making a break, and some day escaping from the island.

One of the latter was Verne. Rugged and unyielding as the jagged rock that protruded from the ocean promontory facing the prison, he had caused Monsieur Grideau, the prison governor, many uneasy moments. Five attempts to escape in three years had made Grideau feel that perhaps some radical new measures should be adopted. So he had assigned Verne to the wharf detail, working outside the prison walls. Grideau had implicit confidence in the power of the surrounding jungle and ocean to thwart any attempt at flight, and he had an idea that by putting Verne out in the open he might appeal to a different side of his nature.

Carrying sacks of flour off the tramp steamer tied at the quay was a task straining every ounce of endurance. Verne seemed heedless of the beating noonday sun on his head and back. The convict next to him, whose snow-white hair made it difficult to guess his age, staggered as he carried his heavy load up the gang-plank and across the wharf. When he was finally able to drop it on the ground, he sank down next to it, as if all life had suddenly left his body.

"It looks like you had enough of this, eh, Moussequ?" asked Verne.

"Twelve years," responded the other. He struggled slowly to his feet and looked at Verne curiously. "How old do you think I am?" he inquired.

"You look about 50," said Verne.

"And I feel about 70," nodded Moussequ. "I'm 36 years old, believe it if you can."

"You've made enough breaks," said Verne dryly. "Why didn't you get away?"

Moussequ shook his head. "No man can get through that jungle," he answered. "It tears you and breaks you—makes you old before your time."

Verne clenched his teeth. "There's nothing a man can't get through to be free," he explained. "It's been done."

"With help from the outside," agreed Moussequ. "A boat waiting down the coast, maybe. Some way they did it—not alone." He shook his head in determination. "No, M'sieu, it can't be done without help. And generally not even then."

Monsieur Cochon was an especially repellent looking character. His round face, flat nose and deep-set, beady dark eyes caused the other convicts to refer to him as "the pig." The manner in which he reported everything about him without giving any direct indication of spying on people made most of the others distrust him as much as they disliked him.

Susan and Julie, who were employed in a little cafe in the town, passed by the wharf in an old-fashioned, battered chaise and paused to look out over the waterfront, a wistful look in their eyes. Their blue, polka-dotted, cotton dresses and small pink parasols were inexpensive adornments, but probably represented the savings of half a year. Julie smoked a cigaret with deep absent-minded puffs, while her companion gazed far out over the water. Neither of them was aware of the silent approach of Cochon until he called out Julie's name.

Julie half turned. "Go away, Pig," she said bluntly.

Cochon's voice was like that of a purring cat. "You don't mean just like that, Julie," he said. "There's no harm in being friendly, you know."

Julie's mouth was set in a hard line. "Men die all the time," she sighed. "And pigs live on and on."

"Things are looking a little better these days," said Cochon, disregarding her attitude. "They tell me you're not doing so good at the cafe."

Julie flared up. "Why buzz around me all the time?" she cried. "Am I the only girl on the island?"

Cochon blinked. "Well, you know how it is, Julie," he said. "A man takes a fancy to a certain thing—and that's the thing he wants."

"I know," cried Julie. "You want to take me out of all this! Into what? How many times do I have to tell you that you're a pig—and a sneak—and a dirty stool-pigeon—and I want you to let me alone!"

She turned her back and stalked away, while Cochon reluctantly turned in the opposite direction. Verne, serving the scene from a short distance, ducked behind a row of packing cases and slipped up to Julie as she paused at the waterfront.

"What do you want?" asked Julie.

"Guess," answered Verne with a grin.

She started to move away, but the convict reached out from behind his shelter and seized her by the ankle.

"Be nice or I'll give it a twist," he said. "You're one of the girls at the cafe, ain't you?"

"What if I am?" asked Julie.

"I'll be there tonight," said Verne. "Keep a light in the window and a couple more in your eyes."

"Tonight you'll be right in a cell where you belong," retorted Julie, as she released herself and hurried away.

The cafe was no better nor worse than the average tropical dive. Julie who was chatting with a kind of forced gaiety at a table where two Dutchmen were buying drinks for the girls, finally managed to get away from her boring companions. She felt unusually tired, and hurried up the stairs to her room on the second floor. Standing before her dressing table, combing her hair, she suddenly caught an image in the glass of the door opening behind her. Verne stood there, a challenging smile on his lips.

"I said I'd be here, baby," he said huskily.

"Best it," ordered Julie, without any trace of emotion.

"Suppose I wasn't a convict?" asked Verne, putting an arm around her as she drew back.

"Suppose I was Snow White?" answered Julie. "Supposing you even looked like somebody I used to go for, where would it get me? If you get caught here, I get shipped back to the mainland."

"I can think of worse things than that," said Verne.

"This isn't my idea of heaven, either," said Julie. "But when you've drifted as much as I have, you're glad to drop anchor—even if it's in mud."

Verne suddenly drew her to him and crushed his mouth against hers. Julie, with a deft movement, freed herself and darted to the door. She paused a moment, and looked at him with a cryptic smile before she went out.

The four guests who had followed Cochon's suggestion about hunting for Verne in the cafe, were just starting for the stairway as Julie came down. For a moment she hesitated, uncertain whether to warn Verne or turn him over to the authorities. In that moment of uncertainty, the choice was taken from her.

"Where are you coming from?" asked one of the guards suspiciously.

Julie realized that she was trapped. "If it's a loose convict you're after," she cried impulsively, "come and get him!"

Guards hurried up the stairs after her, reached the landing and followed Julie's finger into the room directly ahead.

Verne had apparently abandoned any thought of concealing himself or trying to slip out the window. Evidently he had felt that Julie would not give him away.

His eyes sought hers with a mocking look, as he surrendered his hands to the manacles of the guards.

"So you outsmarted me," he said, smiling.

Julie looked at him squarely. "That's what happens," she said, "when smart people get together. One of them winds up ahead."

"So I lose," agreed Verne. "Only what happens when I catch up with you?" As he turned to march along with the guards he cast a final look at her.

"And I'm going to catch up with you, baby."

Grideau, the prison director, was a hard-headed man. Once he had made up his mind, a team of oxen could not change it. Despite Julie's entreaties and protests, he ordered her to leave the colony immediately. When Julie told him that she had no surplus funds, no way of getting any place, he replied that it was no concern of his. His final ultimatum was that she had 12 hours to get away. When Julie, her face red with anger, had left the prison office, Grideau sent for Cochon.

Unlocking a drawer of his desk he took out a bundle of banknotes, counted out a sum of money, and handed it over to the informer.

Looking up at Grideau in a sly manner, Cochon suggested that he would forego the reward if Julie could be placed in his custody. But Grideau, sputtering angrily, flung the money at him and told him to get out.

The convicts' dormitory was a long room with high-barred windows and crude plank beds. On a wooden shelf above each bed were the inmates' few simple possessions.

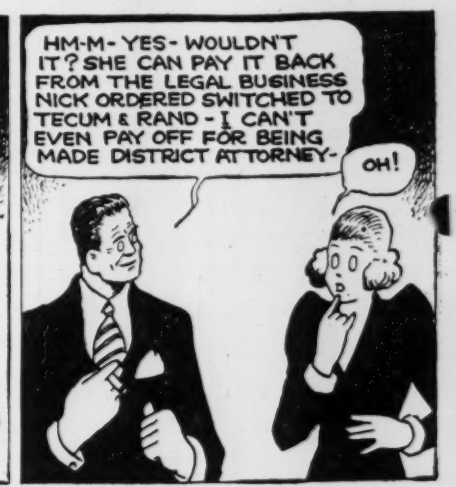

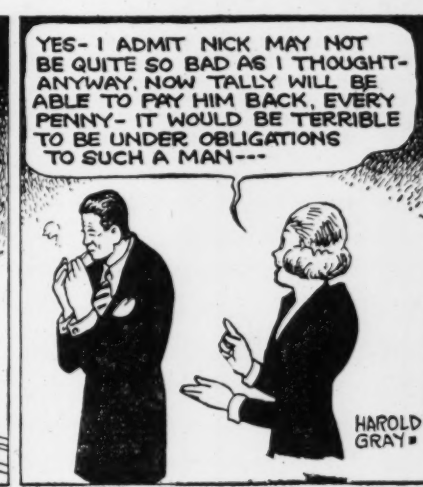

Some of the men were reading; still more were playing at cards of dice. Telez, a murderer with a sharp, lean face and piercing black eyes, was reading a well-worn Bible, mumbling various passages out loud. Cambreau, a man with a kindly face and pensive eyes, about whom the convicts knew little or nothing, regarded Telez for a few minutes, then moved over to his bunk.

"Not exactly the type of reading one would expect to find here," he remarked, a peculiar expression of peace on his face.

At the Point of Death

Your Own Horoscope for Today

By ALICE DENTON JENNINGS, Noted Atlanta Chiropodist.

March 21st and April 19th (ARIES)—Be cautious in dealing with tools, promises and agreements, and in spending. Watch your health today.

January 20th and May 20th (TAURUS)—There are days when it seems better to wait or concentrate on affairs already started, for new beginnings either wear into nothing or run into obstacles. This is one of the days when you may feel that you have accomplished nothing, but if you have plugged along, you will find that your time has not been wasted.

May 21st and June 20th (GEMINI)—Throughout the entire day and evening you will feel a tendency to be quick, but too hasty. You and those around you may be filled with overconfidence, which can give you a disaster of consequence. If these feelings are held under control and you promote interests that are stable and dependable, much progress can be made.

June 21st and July 22nd (CANCER)—Previous to 12:24 noon favors dealing in artistic ideas, dealings with the opposite sex. The afternoon and evening hours suggest extreme caution to avoid misunderstandings and quarrels.

July 23rd and August 22nd (LEO)—A void mispending your energies today; that is, avoid a lot of running around, but if you will turn your efforts towards completing old ideas already started, much can be accomplished.

August 23rd and September 22nd (VIRGO)—Before 9:37 a. m. any laxity in finances should be strongly curbed. Between 9:37 a. m. and 5:48 p. m. favors new plans, work that demands agreeable. After 5:48 p. m. favors old plans already started.

September 23rd and October 22nd (LIBRA)—The day does not appear to favor new or important undertakings. Give well-thought out plans will prove more advantageous.

October 23rd and November 21st (SCORPIO)—The morning hours and until 1:14 p. m. favor work of a substantial nature. After 1:14 p. m. a desire for action may be wisely directed; suggests caution in travel.

November 22nd and December 21st (SAGITTARIUS)—The morning hours and until 4:15 p. m. suggests shunning aggressive people and risky ventures. After 4:15 p. m. favors attentive to necessary duties and methodical work.

December 22nd and January 19th (CAPRICORN)—Take your time before 7 p. m. and do not be disappointed if affairs around you are slow. Today is a better day for looking around you and viewing life from a practical application.

January 20th and February 18th (AQUARIUS)—Today favors trading, real estate, promises and agreements, dealings with older people.

February 19th and March 20th (PISCES)—An undercurrent of illusion permeates the influences through 6:08 p. m. Speculative ideas, financial affairs appear promising, but will have a tendency to be less than they seem. An excellent day to stick to routine matters.

Little Girl Gets Great Big Fish First Time She Ever Tried

Lora Jean Prater, Only 7, Lands 4-Pound Bass at Piedmont Lake.

Shades of Izaak Walton—initial honors for piscatorial prowess among Atlanta fishermen for the 1940 season apparently have been captured by a 7-year-old girl, and a veritable tyro at the fishing game at that.

The able angler is little Lora Jean Prater, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dewey Prater, of 1220 Barnes street, who places her bid for seasonal fame by virtue of the "capture" of a 4-pound bass at Piedmont lake Saturday, the second day of the new fishing year.

Little Lora Jean, snared her speckled beauty with regulation fresh-water tackle, and her feat is even more enhanced by the fact that it was the first time she ever had engaged in the outdoor pastime, which have made men prevaricate and women elucidate.

OREGON STUDENT SENT HUMAN SKINS

Apparently Came From Laboratory Cadavers.

PORTLAND, March 3.—(UP)—Authorities at North Pacific College of Dentistry tonight indicated there would be no discipline for a student who sent human skin to a tannery to be made into gloves. It apparently came from laboratory cadavers.

Two sections of skin were intercepted at the Napa Tanning Company in Napa, Cal., where there is a state law against using human skin. The student, whose name was not disclosed, sent the skin to Orin McDowell, 21, Salem (Ore.) meat cutter, who took it to the East Salem tannery. There, Elmer Griepentrog, the manager, sent it to Napa.

Dr. Herbert C. Miller, president of North Pacific College, said the student would not be disciplined if the skin came from laboratory cadavers.

LEGISLATORS LEAVE BATON ROUGE QUIET

Long Machine Appears To Be Completely Destroyed.

BATON ROUGE, La., March 3.—(AP)—Unaccustomed quiet descended on Louisiana's capital today as bitterly conflicting political enemies dispersed after apparently complete destruction of the old Long machine.

Governor Earl K. Long said he expected to rest "for the next three or four days" and Governor-designate Sam H. Jones planned a brief vacation before formulating plans for his administration and the regular legislative session in May.

"By the grace of God," he said, "we will give the people the kind of government for which they voted on February 20."

Governor Long, humiliated yesterday by a formerly docile legislature which refused to convene at his call and by the Democratic state central committee, which scratched its previous nomination of him as secretary of state, still relied on court action to save the latter post.

Last night, after being thwarted by the legislature and the committee, he obtained a temporary restraining order in district court here prohibiting Secretary of State E. A. Conway from placing the same of James A. Gremlington on the ballot for the secretary of state office in the general election April 16.

Judge J. D. Womack set March 11 for a hearing at which Conway and other defendants must show cause why a preliminary injunction should not be issued.

WATERWAYS HELD VITAL TO DEFENSE

F. D. R. Lauds Progress Made in That Field and Flood Control.

WASHINGTON, March 3.—(AP)—President Roosevelt told the rivers and harbors congress today that development of the nation's waterways was essential to national defense.

The organization, which will hold its annual convention here next week, made public a letter from the President which said: "It is gratifying at a time when world events force us to attend more closely to our system of national defense to know that the national rivers and harbors congress has through the years of its existence advocated a rational development of our waterways, an element of our communication system essential to the safety and defense of the nation."

"It seems to me that the great strides we have made during the past seven years in the effective development of our waterways and the solution of flood control problems are in no small measure due to the comprehensive and integrated program developed and forwarded by the national rivers and harbors congress."

'Strato Clipper' Is Completed, Called 'New Era' in Air Travel

NEW YORK, March 3.—(AP)—The world's first airliner designed to fly at 250 miles an hour at heights of four to five miles will be turned over to Pan-American Company of Seattle on March 11. Passengers by the Boeing Aircraft transport company announced tonight.

With a maximum of 33 seats, supercharged engines, flight deck, and passenger compartment, the four-engine plane will be put in service on one of the carrier's runs to South America.

Other planes of the same type will follow. Before the start of the war in Europe, at least one of them was intended for trans-Atlantic service, but whether it will be assigned to that run will depend on the continuance of the "combat zone" designation for Ireland.

Known as the "strato-clipper," this type of plane, with a top speed of 300 miles an hour, is being called the "new era" transport in that it enables the crew to avoid about 85 per cent of the bad weather in the lower levels. It has been under development for three years. Stressed to stand

Finnish Children Think Sacks Of Potatoes Broke Bomb's Fall

Missile Crashed Into Their Cellar, But Did Not Explode.

By WILLIAM L. WHITE, Special Correspondent.

EN ROUTE TO THE ARCTIC, SOMEWHERE IN FINLAND.—(By Mail).—The country out of the window is very flat, but the forests get thinner as we go further north. Here and there are green clearings where the Finn store the brief heat of the short summer sun in hay fields. The hay is cured in the little log hay barns which dot these clearings—they average four of five hay barns to a 40-acre tract—and the sunshine comes out in winter in butter and rich milk.

Now and then a little wooden town swings by the car window. Except for a slight difference in window and door trim and the slope of roofs, it might be Indiana or Minnesota.

But these Finns are all comfortable—there are no slums near the railroad tracks—just comfortable middle class frame houses. One swings by, with all its windows shattered, slightly askew on its base and an end wall blown in. Just beside it is a bomb crater 30 feet across—and Russians must have landed the bomb, mired this single track railway line which joins the Arctic circle from Helsinki and the south.

Three Children Under 12.
In the adjoining compartment are three children—two boys and a girl all under 12—traveling alone with tags around their necks. They are on their way to a town just over the border in Sweden. Their father is a druggist in the town we have just come through. Yesterday it was bombed.

The children ran to huddle in the cellar when the siren screamed—a 200 kilo Russian bomb crashed through the roof and into the cellar, but did not go off, perhaps, the children say, because it first went through ten sacks of potatoes—their winter's supply—stored there, and these broke the fall.

The children are on their way to a druggist in Sweden whose name is written on the tags—an acquaintance of their father's who promised to keep them until the end of the war.

The children are having their pictures taken with the chubby, genial representative of the American benevolent committee, and what a like is how genuine it all is. He is as genuinely desirous of helping the less fortunate as are the contributors to the fund.

The photographer is genuinely employed by the committee so that the contributors at home may have a genuine picture of its activities in relief of genuine civilian suffering. The little girl is genuinely uncomfortable sitting on the photographer's knee just beneath his genuinely benevolent smile.

FINNS NEST PLANES.

The two little boys are scowling from either side at the lens with genuine suspicion. What the children of Finland really need is not this smiling, soft-handed, soft-headed benevolence in horn-rimmed spectacles, but some pursuit planes to chase the bombers back to Russia, a fact of which all are acutely aware, including the contributors to the fund, who would genuinely like to keep on being helpful in the wrong way for the right reasons, so that the little children, when they are blown through the roof, will still have roses in their cheeks from this genuine benevolence, and if you have ever seen anything more genuine than all this I don't know where it is.

ICKES HAILS GAINS UNDER ROOSEVELT

He Says Department Has Advanced More Than in Previous History.

WASHINGTON, March 3.—(AP) Secretary Ickes, hailing seven years of the New Deal, said today that more had been done in this period to make the Interior Department "a department of conservation" than was accomplished in the 91 prior years of its existence.

In observance of the administration's anniversary tomorrow, the Interior Department released a 2,500-word summary of achievements which attributed the swing toward conservation to "the congress by legislation, President Roosevelt by executive action, and the Department of the Interior by deliberate, aggressive administration and policy."

It included the observation by Ickes that when President Franklin D. Roosevelt signed a bill to create the Interior Department in 1849 "it was purposely conceived as a department of exploitation."

"That was considered the need of the country then as resources appeared endless," Ickes continued. "But of recent years by executive action, legislation and administration, that policy has been completely reversed and much of the reversal has been accomplished in the last seven years."

"Under President Roosevelt, resources have been protected and conserved so that they will last a long while, although our task is not complete as yet."

ATLANTAN WRITES ABOUT OLD SOUTH

Dr. Jacobs' Novel To Be Published Today.

Life in the old south both before and during the War Between the States still continues to provide a theme for story tellers, and the latest addition to the romance and history of those times is a novel from the pen of Dr. Thorne Jacobs, president of Oglethorpe University, entitled "Red Lanterns on St. Michael's."

It will be published today by E. P. Dutton & Company of New York, and will be reviewed in detail in the book section of The Constitution Sunday, March 10.

FLOOD WATER HITS TOWN IN KENTUCKY

LOUISVILLE, Ky., March 3.—(AP)—Water from rain-swollen salt River rolled nearly five feet deep today through streets of Taylorsville, off-flooded, low-lying county seat town of 900 about 30 miles southeast of Louisville.

County Judge E. J. Snyder reported between 200 and 300 persons had been lured from one-story homes. Others living in two-story houses, he said, took refuge on the second floors. Judge Snyder said he expected the river to crest at a level one-half foot higher.

NAZIS PLEDGE U. S. SEA CONSIDERATION

BERLIN, March 3.—(AP) (via radio)—Grand Admiral Erich Raeder declared today that "the German navy will be guided by the principle to do its very best to show every possible consideration to American vessels wherever they may be." The Nazi naval chief spoke by radio to the United States.

The admiral's principle point in his discussion was Germany's oft-stated contention that Britain has made all her shipping liable to attack by arming merchant ships and using peaceful craft for military purposes.

Labor Looks Toward a New Order

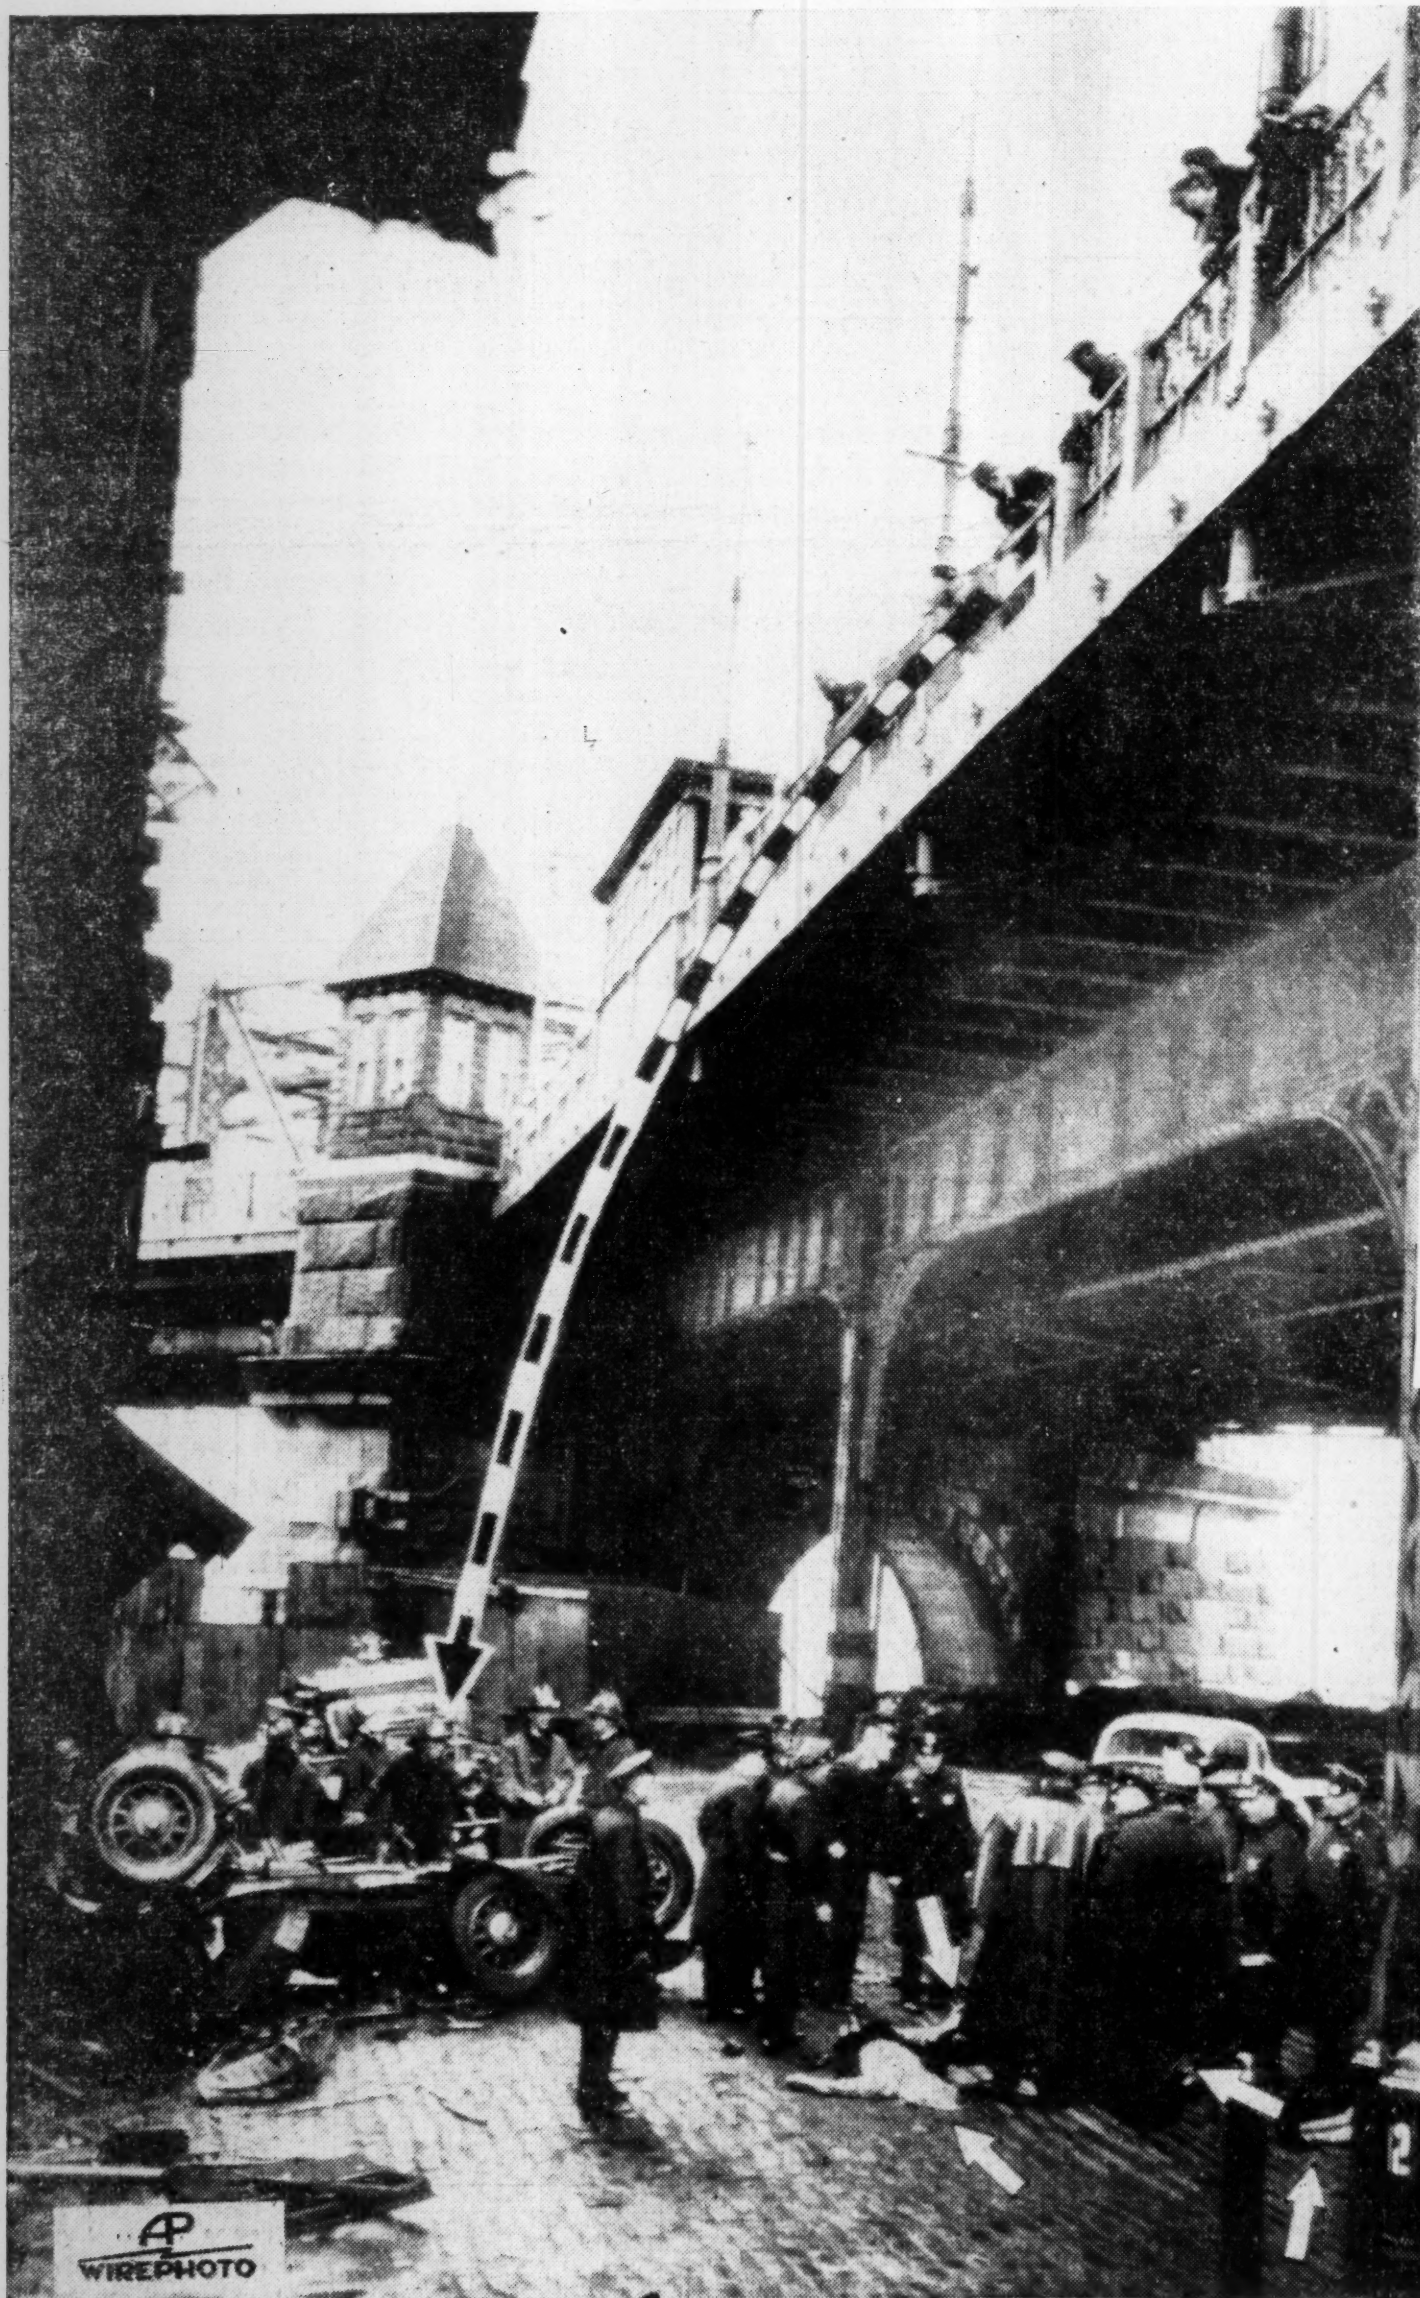

HEAR FOES RAPPED Labor leaders in the south heard President Green and other speakers assail enemies of organized labor at the closing session yesterday. Interest displayed is indicated by, left to right, R. C. Woody, Spartanburg, S. C., and J. C. Leister and D. W. Birdwell, both of Fairmont, S. C. More than 2,000 delegates attended the closing session of the conference. (Story on Page 1.)

CLASS HATRED 'OUT' A new order in relations between employer and employee was proposed by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, in a sermon yesterday morning at Druid Hills Baptist church. He urged righteousness and social consciousness in place of class hatred and bitterness to bring about the "abundant life." (Story on Page 3)

DEATH SKID This was the scene in New York yesterday, immediately after an automobile carrying six persons plunged through an iron viaduct rail on the approach to the Macombs Dam bridge, and plunged 30 feet into a coal bunker. Five of the group died instantly, and the sixth succumbed in a hospital. Bodies of five of the victims are shown here by arrows, while the broken line indicates the path of the plunge. The accident was the result of a sudden skid on wet pavement. (Story on Page 1.)

PERMIT ME George Googe, southern representative of the AFL, presided at the closing session of the Southern Labor Conference and introduced the speakers. (Story on Page 1.)

CRITIC Administration of the Wagner act by the National Labor Relations Board was criticized yesterday by Representative Robert Ramspeck, who told labor delegates "you don't need much legislation."

WHAT'S THIS? Yep, it's the clock tower of Independence Hall and the carillon tower of the Belgian pavilion, seen through the rigging of the square rigger Yankee, which forms the central display unit of the combined New England states exhibit at the World's Fair of 1940 in New York.
